July 2004

Family/Partnership-centered Conjoint Behavioral Consultation: The Reconceptualization of a Model

Susan M. Sheridan
University of Nebraska - Lincoln, ssheridan2@unl.edu

Brandy Clarke
University of Nebraska - Lincoln

Jennifer Burt
University of Nebraska - Lincoln

Diane Marti
University of Nebraska - Lincoln

Ariadne V. Schemm
University of Nebraska - Lincoln

See next page for additional authors

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.unl.edu/cyfsposters

Part of the Pre-Elementary, Early Childhood, Kindergarten Teacher Education Commons

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Children, Youth, Families & Schools, Nebraska Center for Research on at DigitalCommons@University of Nebraska - Lincoln. It has been accepted for inclusion in Posters, Addresses, & Presentations from CYFS by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@University of Nebraska - Lincoln.
Authors
Susan M. Sheridan, Brandy Clarke, Jennifer Burt, Diane Marti, Ariadne V. Schemm, Ashley Rohlk, and Michelle Swanger
Family/Partnership-centered Conjunct Behavioral Consultation: The Reconceptualization of a Model
Susan M. Sheridan, Ph.D., Brandy Clarke, Jennifer Burt, Diane Marti, Ariadne V. Schemm, Ashley Rohlik, Michelle Swanger
University of Nebraska-Lincoln

Background to Conjunct Behavioral Consultation

- The importance of working meaningfully and constructively with families in promoting a child's learning and adjustment is unequivocal. Home-school partnerships have been shown to relate to many positive outcomes for children, families, teachers, and schools.
- Conjunct Behavioral Consultation (CBC; Sheridan, Kratochwill, & Bergan, 1996) is a structured, indirect model of service delivery whereby parents and teachers are joined to collaboratively address needs and concerns of a child with the assistance of a consultant. Goals of CBC encompass those focused on addressing child needs, and developing home-school partnerships.
- CBC is procedurally operationalized via conjoint interviews (Problem Identification, Problem Analysis, and Treatment Evaluation) aimed at prioritizing shared concerns across home and school settings, estimating factors contributing to the identified concern, developing an agreeable plan, and evaluating the child's progress toward goals.
- Traditional approaches to CBC emphasize a problem-solving orientation, aimed largely at addressing problems experienced by individual children.

CBC from a Family-Centered, Strengths-based Perspective

- Implicit in CBC is a goal toward strengthening support systems within a child's life; however, few mechanisms in the model are aimed specifically at this purpose.
- Family-centered approaches, including those that emphasize family empowerment, support families in proactively identifying needs, mobilizing resources, and accomplishing goals (Dunst, Trivette, & Deal, 1994).
- Family-Centered Services (FCS) strive to help families become "better able to solve problems, meet needs, or achieve aspirations by promoting the acquisition of competencies that support and strengthen functioning in a way that permits a greater sense of individual or group control over its developmental course" (Dunst, Trivette, & Cornell, 1994, p. 162). Emphasis is placed on assisting families to access resources and use their own abilities in an empowering manner.
- From a family-centered perspective, CBC is conceptualized as "a framework for working with families and schools that promotes strengths and capacity building within individuals and systems, rather than focusing [only] on the resolution of problems or remediation of deficits" (Sheridan et al., 2004).
- CBC can be responsive to and address child needs as identified by parents and teachers; build skills and competencies within families and schools; and promote participation and collaboration among systems. Furthermore, it extends family centered approaches by acknowledging that children and families do not exist in a vacuum, and that children function within and across systems, which exert bidirectional and reciprocal influences over each other.
- To date, little conceptual work has been conducted that documents how CBC can be implemented within and extend a family-centered framework, while retaining the core goals, principles, characteristics, and procedural guidelines of each.