PROFESSIONAL AND ORGANIZATIONAL DEVELOPMENT NETWORK IN HIGHER EDUCATION

August 20, 1990

Dear POD Colleagues:

I hope you are refreshed and energized for the fall season of faculty development activity! Your POD committees, CORE, and Executive Directors have spent the summer working on a great variety of tasks. This newsletter will bring you up to date on many of these.

CONFERENCE HIGHLIGHTS

Registration

Registrations are coming in fast for our annual fall conference, scheduled for November 1-4 at Granlibakken, near Tahoe City, California. We have about 50 off-site spaces remaining. If you are lucky enough to get one of those, be sure to send your conference registration form to Wini Anderson as soon as possible. If you are planning to stay in a private residence, you MUST complete the daily registration form and mail to Granlibakken by October 1st to participate in on-site meals.

Terrific Program

Our theme, "Developing Our Profession and Ourselves," stimulated a flood of concurrent session proposals. Program Committee Chair, Marilyn Leach, invented a collaborative review process to identify outstanding proposals attractive to POD members--results are summarized on the attached list. Our pre-conference workshop topics include both perennial favorites and new areas for growth. And, we have Joan North, Jack Schuster, Bill McKeachie, and Martin ("Donahue") Nemko and his special guests to provide enlightening commentary in plenary sessions. Want to be a "sponsor" for POD's "Donahue" Show? Bring a 60-second "commercial" related to faculty development. Air time is free, frivolity is encouraged!

Networking After Dark

Creativity will be its own reward at our Thursday evening Resource Fair and Dessert Reception, coordinated by Tom Angelo. Bring a poster, table display, or handouts to represent your program or center. After dinner, from 7:30 to 9:00 pm visit informational displays and renew acquaintances while sampling Granlibakken's tempting desserts. Newcomers can see what "POD" folks do, and everyone can unwind from a day of traveling or pre-conference workshops. To reserve a display area, use the enclosed reservation form. Send your form to Tom by September 15, 1990.

Lake Shore Excursion

Time for personal rejuvenation and exploration of the natural beauty of the area is built right into the program. Sandy Tomlinson and Lion Gardner have researched the area and have planned a delightful Saturday afternoon outdoors where you can savor the fresh Sierra mountain air. We'll need a head count to arrange transportation, so be sure to complete the attached reservation form!

Excellent Food--and plenty of it!

Granlibakken's owners pride themselves on serving outstanding meals prepared by a European-trained chef. You'll never leave the table hungry at Granlibakken, and the variety will surprise and tempt you far beyond the limits of caloric rationality.

Early-Bird Registration and Welcoming Activities

Conference registration chair, Wini Anderson, has arranged to begin registration Wednesday afternoon to accommodate early arrivals and pre-conference workshop participants. We'll have a social hour with complimentary beverages Wednesday from 5-6 pm, and welcoming activities after dinner organized by Kay Herr. We hope you can join us for these early bird events. Since enrollment in the pre-conference workshop is limited, we highly recommend that you pre-register.

Discount Airfares available from United Airlines

Save from 5-40% by making your reservation through United's Convention Desk at (800)521-4041. Tell them you are going to Granlibakken for the POD Conference, Contract Number 0056N. United will mail your tickets or you may purchase them from your local travel agent. Seats may be limited, so call early.

MEMBERSHIP YEAR

The POD Membership year is September 1st through August 31st of the following calendar year. This means we will be beginning a new membership year September 1, 1990. Many of our members pay memberships in May, June or July with their Conference Early-Bird Registrations for the following year's benefits (reduced conference fee, To Improve the Academy, newsletters, membership directory, Bright Ideas, etc.) Others prefer to wait until the membership year has begun. Those of you who attend the Conference will receive the 1990 issue of To Improve the Academy (assuming it is off the press by then). For those of you who will not attend the conference at Granlibakkan, we will mail your issue in November or as soon as your membership is paid. If you joined since April 1990, your benefits will occur in the 1990 membership year.

If you wish to renew your membership, but will not attend the conference, please mail them directly to me to the address on the letterhead.

Membership List

We are continuing to work on the membership list to correct errors, or make address changes. Please let me know if you have changes, so that we can make the list as accurate as possible. These lists are used to send newsletters and other POD materials to you, by members to contact the rest of the membership, and occasionally they are purchased by those who have openings in faculty development or have other legitimate needs to contact the membership.

You should have received the final Membership Directory along with the Bright Ideas booklet in May. If you did not, please let me know.

Bright Ideas Update

By now, we hope that you have read the Bright Ideas booklet, and have thought of ways you can adapt some of them to your own campus. The award, in the form of a handsome, leaded-glass lamp created by John Andrews, has been making its way around the country. After six months in Nebraska with Dan Wheeler and Del Wright, it is now either with Jerome Jewler at the U. of S. Carolina, or has continued its journey to Lois Wells in the Virginia Community College System. It will be returned to the POD Conference at Granlibakkan by Larry Quinslan (Rochester Institute of Tech., and CORE member) to be awarded again to the next recipient(s) of the Bright Idea of the Year.

This means, that you should begin thinking of your own "Bright Ideas" to bring to the Conference. We need lots of innovative or useful suggestions to share with others. POD has had a long tradition of sharing with others, so make your contribution to the 1991 issue.

Handbook for New Practitioners

The Handbook for New Practitioners or some back issues of To Improve the Academy are now being distributed by New Forums Press, P.O. Box 876, Stillwater, OK 74076. The Handbook is $15.00 plus $2.50 handling. Only a limited number of back issues of To Improve the Academy are available ($10.00 plus $2.50 handling).

To Improve the Academy

Editor Linda Hilsen and Associate Editors Lion Gardner, Mary Deane Sorcinelli, Sandra Holmes, Nancy Chism, and Mary Ann Shea are working long and hard in reviewing and editing submissions for the 1990 issue of To Improve the Academy. The final copy should be coming out just in time for our November conference, or will be mailed soon after. The rolling submissions policy has worked reasonably well, so think about getting started on an article for the next issue!

Kenneth Zahorski has agreed to serve as the editor for the 1991 issue so send your manuscripts to him at St. Norbert College, DePere, WI 54115.

New Directions Series

Under the Editorship of Marilla Svinicki, POD members have written issue #42 of the New Directions Series. It is entitled, "The Changing Face of College Teaching", published by Jossey-Bass Publishers, Summer 1990. Get your copy now!!

Request

K. J. Stafford, Educational Technology Centre, City Polytechnic of Hong Kong and POD member is interested in receiving information about what form teaching awards take in other institutions. He is interested in how and why they are offered, so if you have awards on your campus, K. J. would be interested in hearing from you! (Room 2014B Zone 2, 83 TAT CHEE Avenue, City Polytechnic of Hong Kong, Kowloon Tong, Hong Kong.)

POD Executive Director Position

In the Spring of 1991, a new Executive Director(s), will assume leadership for our organization. Past members who have served POD in this way have contributed much in time and talent to make the organization work. At the 1990 Conference we will honor these people in recognition of their contributions.

A year ago, on a trial basis, the tasks of the Executive Director were divided into two areas. Emily (Rusty) Wadsworth took responsibility for publications and programs, while I have worked with the membership and financial tasks. The first year Rusty organized the CORE meetings and was the external contact person. This year, I am assuming those responsibilities. This division of tasks has worked well except for some confusion among members about whom to call for what.

Currently, a committee chaired by Glenn Ross Johnson and including Nancy Chism and Marilla Svinicki, have been examining this arrangement as well as exploring other possibilities for managing the business of the organization. They will present ideas for discussion at the fall CORE meeting. If you have ideas or suggestions regarding this topic, please forward them to Glenn R. Johnson, Texas A & M Univ., College Station, TX 77843-4232.

Teaching Excellence

The first year of our essay series, Teaching Excellence, has been extremely successful. Eight issues were distributed to subscribers in 1989-90. Eight more are scheduled for 1990-91. This year, Marilla Svinicki will serve as editor while Sandy Tomlinson and Loren Ekroth will be Associate Editors. Topics for the 1990-91 essay series include:

- "Putting the Student in the Midst of the Problem," John Boehrer, Harvard U.
- "The Power of Collaborative Learning," Jean McGregor, Evergreen State Coll.

- "Course Tests: Integratd Features of Instruction," Ohmer Milton, U. of Tennessee

SEE YOU AT GRANLIBAKKAN!

David Way, Director of Instructional Support, Cornell University, is working on a book of narrative accounts by higher education professionals—faculty and administrators—dealing with critical experiences leading to professional growth within the areas of professional, instructional and organizational development. The following passage by Donald Schon from the book Reflection in Teacher Education (edited by Peter Grimmett and Gaalen Erickson, 1988, Teachers College Press, pg. 26) provides a rationale for this book.

How may we be helped to learn from past experience in the mode of reflective transformation? We can encourage one another to tell stories about experiences that hold elements of surprise, positive or negative. Stories are products of reflection, but we do not usually hold onto them long enough to make them objects of reflection in their own right. When we get into the habit of recording our stories, we can look at them again, attending to the meaning we have built into them and attending, as well, to our strategies of narrative description. We can get curious about what makes a “good story”—a story that is faithful to past experience, coherent in its own right, and evocative for future reflection-in-action. We can pay attention to the assumptions and ways of framing experience built into our stories—something that we are very much helped to do when we have access to the very different stories different persons often tell about “the same events.” We can tell stories about it, reflect on the stories we have told, notice the very different stories that different individuals often construct from the “same events,” practice using our stories as themes from which to construct new variations, through reflection-in-action, in new teaching situations. We can see ourselves as builders of repertoire rather than as accumulators of procedures and methods.

Each narrative should not only be an accounting of a transformational experience but an exercise in reflection on action that distills out the professional knowledge gained from the experience or experiences. Contributors are encouraged to be as explicit as possible about the ways both their actions and thought have been modified and how feelings such as fear, confusion, surprise and confidence play a part in that transformation. The narratives should be balanced between “rich contextual detail,” as Lee Shulman puts it, and the elegant construction of knowledge which can guide practice. Included in the book’s domain will be moral and spiritual dimensions as well.

POD members are encouraged to contribute to this effort by reflecting on their own experiences and writing up stories of growth experiences and providing narrative constructions of professional knowledge resulting from those experiences. Examples of topics include stories which can help us understand how people who are currently in instructional, professional or organizational development got into the field, experiences of on-the-spot decisions which significantly changed the way we do things, improvisations, forms of reflection-in-action. Criteria which will be useful in choosing stories to share include: 1) economy—the power and significance of the story is more important than its length; 2) selectivity—how discrete is the story, is there a point embedded in one account or is it necessary to tell more than one story (the former is more preferable than the latter) and 3) familiarity—is the story one which POD members can relate to and learn from professionally?. Interested individuals are encouraged to read the Connelly & Clandinin article “Stories of Experience and Narrative Inquiry” in the June-July 1990 issue of Educational Researcher for a more thorough discussion of story and narrative characteristics.

POD members who are interested in this project who would like more information or would like to contribute a narrative account for consideration are welcome to meet with David Way during the meeting in Tahoe City. In the meantime all interested are encouraged to contact David by writing or calling him:
