"Range Me All The Men of The World in Rows"

Once there was a man who said: "Range me all the men of the world in rows and instantly there was terrible clamor among the people against being arranged in rows. there was a loud quarrel worldwide it endured for ages and blood was shed by those who would not stand in rows.
and by those who pined to stand in rows eventually the man went to death weeping and those who stayed in bloody scuffle knew not the great sim-

To God a mighty hymn a song of col-blue

peals of brutes the chanting of flowers the screams of cut trees the sense less babble of hens
and wise
men
a clut-tered in-cho-her-en-cy that says at the stars oh
God
save
"Have You Ever Made a Just Man?" you will hear the thud of his defeat.
A man went before a strange God the God of many men - sadly wise and the deity thundered loudly.
Fat with rage and puffing

Kneel mortal and cringe and grovel and do homage then the man went to another God the God of his inner thoughts and this one looked at him with soft eyes lit with infinite compassion and said 'my poor
