INTRODUCTION

Lion Gardener, the author of the Relation which is here printed for the first time from the original manuscript, is a striking figure in early New England history. The main facts of his life are given by himself in the Relation; a few items are to be found in contemporary records and in his letters to John Winthrop the younger. These have all been gathered together and admirably summarized by Mr. Curtiss C. Gardiner, a descendant, in his work entitled Lion Gardiner and His Descendants.

Born in England in 1599, Lion Gardener belonged, probably, to a family of the lesser gentry, but his ancestry has never been successfully traced. From his later life and opinions it is certain that his sympathies were with the Parliamentary party as against Charles the First; and with the temporary ascendency of the King, Gardener, in common with many other Englishmen of like political opinions, sought adventure and fortune as a soldier in the Low Countries. In 1635, while "Enginear & maist of works of fortification in the legers of the prince of Orang," being persuaded thereto by John Davenport, Hugh Peters, and others, he agreed to enter the employ of the English Company then engaged in establishing a settlement on the lower Connecticut. His term of service was to be four years, with a compensation of £100 per annum. He was to serve the Company "only in the drawing, ordering, & Making of a cittie, Townes, or forts of defence," under the direction of John Winthrop, Jr. Having decided upon this new venture, he married, at Woerdon, in Holland, Mary Wilemson of that place, and on July 10, 1635, they left Woerdon and embarked, probably at Rotterdam, in the ship Batcheler bound for New England by way of London. There we get a glimpse of them in a letter written to John Winthrop, Jr., by Edward Hopkins:

Per the shipp Batchler whom God preserve.
London the 16th of August, 1635.

Mr. Jno. Winthrop.

Sir,—My best respects premised &c., you may please to understand I have now cleared of from hence the North Sea Boatt, . . . Serieant Gardener and Wm. Job his workmaster, with the Serieants wife and his mayd, come over in this barque. Yf you require it of them both Gardener & Job can shew you their covenants with the Company, whereby you may in part perceave what to require of them, and what to performe to them; they are all to be att the Companies charge for matter of diett. 1

From the same letter it appears that Sergeant Gardener drew £30 of his first year's wages. There were probably no other passengers. Hopkins was not very enthusiastic in his description of the crew of the little bark. In the letter just quoted he says: "I cannott say much for master nor men, to incourage you to keepe them there yf you can provide your selfe of others that are fitting for the employment. It was nott easy here to gett any att this tyme, to goe in soe small a vessell, and therefore I was forced to take some, that otherwise I would nott haue medled withall. The master is able enough, but savours nott godliness."

The Batcheler got off to sea at Gravesend on the 18th of August and arrived at Boston late in November, 1635. Gardener's arrival is thus quaintly noted by Governor Winthrop, the elder, in his Journal under the date of November 28th: "Here arrived a small Norsey bark of twenty-five tons sent by Lords Say, etc., with one Gardiner, an expert engineer or work base, and provisions of all sorts, to begin a fort at the mouth of Connecticut. She came through many great tempests; yet, through the Lord's great providence, her passengers, twelve men, two women, and goods, all safe."

Owing to the fact that a severe winter had set in, Gardener remained for several months in Boston. While there he assisted in completing the fortifications on Fort Hill. The records show that at a general meeting on the "23d of the 11th moneth, 1635, [Jan. 23, 1636, N. S.] . . . It was likewise agreed that for the raying of a new Worke of fortification upon the Forthill, about that which is there alreddy begune, the whole towne would bestowe fourteene dayes worke, . . . The Worke also is to be gon in hand with soe soone as Weather will permitt in regard that the Ingineere, Mr. Lyon Garner, who doth soe freely offer his help thereunto hath but a short time to stay."

In the spring Gardener and his party proceeded to their destination in the same ship in which they had crossed the Atlantic, and in March, probably, arrived at the mouth of the Connecticut river, where they found the small clearing and settlement begun during the winter by Winthrop's advance party. With the materials which he had brought with him in the Batcheler, Gardener at once began the construction of a fort, which was called Saybrooke after Viscount Say and Sele and Lord Brooke, two of the more prominent patentees of the Company.

On April 1st, 1636, John Winthrop, Jr., the Company's agent, arrived at the fort bringing friendly messages and remembrances for Gardener from Sir Richard Saltonstall, Hugh Peters, and William Pynchon. On the 29th of the same month his son, David Gardener, was born, being the first child born of English parents in Connecticut.

In the midst of his official labors of fortifying and directing the affairs of the settlement, the Pequot war broke out, and Gardener found himself in the center of hostilities. The events of this brief, sanguinary, and decisive struggle between the first settlers and their Indian neighbors have been so frequently described and are so readily accessible in all our histories that it would be superfluous to even epitomize them here. Nor is it necessary to give a detailed account of Gardener's share in the proceedings. The part he played is set forth in the Relation itself, written for this express purpose, which it accomplishes both succinctly and picturesquely. It is one of the most valuable and interesting bits of colonial autobiography that we possess. But the distinctive facts which should be remembered regarding Gardener's actions at the time are, that he was rightly incensed at the blundering expedition under Endecott sent out from Massachusetts against the Pequots by Sir Henry Vane, and that, as a professional soldier he may well be pardoned for questioning the military strength and ability of the delegation under Mason. In putting the loyalty of Uncas and the Mohegan allies to a test, and in weeding out the physically unfit from Mason's company before re-enforcing it with twenty men from his own command, Gardener was only exercising the rudiments of military caution. With the success of the united expedition against Mystic Fort no one was more pleased than he, for, with the suppression of the Indians, he was hopeful of his own work being more swiftly furthered—a hope which was soon dashed.

In 1639 his contract with the Saybrook Company expired, but as early as November, 1636, he had foreseen that upon the completion of his contract it was more than likely that he would be obliged to shift for himself. Writing to the younger Winthrop, 6 November, 1636, Gardener had said: "Heare hath come many vessels with provision, to goe vp to the plantations, but none for vs. It seemes that wee have neather masters nor owners, but are left like soe many servaunts whose masters are willinge to be quitt of them, . . . there shall be noe cause to complayne of our fidelitie and indeavours to you ward,” but, “if I see that there be not such care for vs that owr lives may be preserved, then must I be forced to shift as the Lord shall direct. I wish that it may be for God’s glory and all your credits and profitts. Heare is not 5 shillings of money and noe bevor.”4 This letter shows clearly into what a necessitous condition the Saybrook settlement had soon fallen, and it is not to be wondered at that Gardener had begun to think of other employment or occupation.

On the 3rd of May, 1639, he purchased from the Indians the large island, east of Long Island, which now bears his name, but which he and his contemporaries always called the Isle of Wight. Subsequently, he procured a grant of the island from an agent of the Earl of Stirling, the grantee of the King of England, and in September 1686, Governor Dongan of New York issued a confirmatory grant to David Gardener, the son of Lion.

Gardener removed with his family to the island soon after the purchase, accompanied by a number of his old soldiers from the fort, and this little emigration resulted in what is said to have been the earliest English settlement within the present limits of the state of New York. His second daughter, Elizabeth, born September 14, 1641, was the first child born of English parents in New York state.

Gardener resided on his island for some fourteen years pursuing successfully the career of a farmer and landed proprietor. In 1653 he placed it in the hands of overseers and removed to East Hampton, L. I., where in 1649 he and some associates had purchased thirty thousand acres of land for a settlement. He was chosen a magistrate and took a leading part in the affairs of the town. In 1655 and 1657 he served on a committee that journeyed to Hartford to treat with the magistracy about placing East Hampton under the protection of Connecticut.

In the summer of 1660 he wrote the Relation, prefixing to it a letter to his friends, Robert Chapman and Thomas Hurlburt, it having been composed at their and Major John Mason’s request. The probabilities are that it was forwarded to Chapman at Saybrook by some friend or servant of Gardener’s. Robert Chapman was a member of the General Assembly of Connecticut at the sessions held in October 1660 and May 1661, and he doubtless took the manuscript up to Hartford with him when attending one or the other of these sessions and there carried out Gardener’s suggestion of letting it be seen by his life-long friend, John Winthrop, Jr., then Governor of the Colony. At all events the manuscript found its way into the Governor’s possession for it bears upon it an endorsement in his bold handwriting.

The character of Lion Gardener is brought out with charming distinctness in the Relation. Common sense and splendid courage, the severity and grim humor of the soldier, love of justice and honesty in all things with all men—even Indians,—and the sturdy independence of the best type of liberal Puritan, are qualities that one may be quite sure the commander of Saybrook Fort possessed. Writing, probably, very much as he would have spoken, his language shows unmistakable traces of the influence of that Genevan Bible which doubtless was never far from his hand in leisure moments. Nor was this the only book that he possessed. Writing to Winthrop in April, 1650, about a young man, not named, for a minister, Gardener says: “... and being he is but a yong man, hapily [haply] he hath not manie books, thearfore let him know what I have. First, the 3 Books of Martters, Erasmus, moste of Perkins, Wilsons Dictionare, a large Concordiance, Mayor on the New T[e]stement ; Some of theas, with othar that I have, may be vcefull to him.” The Dictionary, in all likelihood, was Thomas Wilson’s Christian Dictionary, a work that enjoys the distinction of being the first attempt in English towards a dictionary of the Bible. “Moste of Perkins” would fill a good-sized shelf, that theological giant of the 16th century having been a most prolific writer. One cannot help wondering which of Erasmus’ works it was that Gardener had added as spice to his sombre little collection of books. But however much of theology he may have read, it did not, as was too often the case in his day, kill warm human sense and tolerance in him. The story of his long friendship with the great Indian chief, Wyandanch, a friendship that continued steadfast and unbroken till death, is one of the noblest chapters in the history of the relations of white man and Indian. Lion Gardener died in 1663 aged 64 and two years later his wife Mary followed him. Both were buried in the south-end burying ground at East Hampton. Their Island was entailed on the first male heirs of the Gardener family and was never to be alienated. This condition was observed for more than a century and a half, or until the death in 1829 of the eighth proprietor of the Island, when, he leaving no issue, it passed to a younger brother. It is still owned by members of the family and this remarkable record is the only illustration of the practical working of the law of primogeniture in this country, over so long a period of time.

The manuscript of the Relation as it exists to-day is in a remarkably good state of preservation though a trifle brown and stained. It consists of ten leaves seven and one-fourth by ten and three-fourths inches in size, excepting the last leaf which is some two inches narrower. The first eight leaves are stitched together as one signature, and the last two form a second. These last two leaves were undoubtedly written several months later than the date at the head of the prefatory letter to Chapman and Hurlburt, but there is no reason to suppose they were not attached to the first signature when they left the hands of Gardener. The first leaf is entirely blank. The first page of the second leaf contains the title. The letter to Chapman and Hurlburt appears on the reverse side of the third leaf and here also begins the pagination extending from 1 to 12 which is continued over the five succeeding leaves and the first page of the following, or ninth. On the first page of the tenth and last leaf, in the upper left hand corner, appears the name “Johnson” and a few other words too indistinct to be made out but which appear to be mere scribblings.

The title, if it may be so called, “Lieut. Lion Gardiner his relation of the Pequot Warres,” is in the handwriting of John Winthrop, Jr. Closely following it is the note, written in the minute and rather illegible hand of William Trumbull Williams, Esq., “found among Gov Trumbulls papers 1809 by me,” etc. The endorsement, “No 6—17 Papers,” and the word “originall” are written in a hand strongly resembling that of Joseph Trumbull. The words “Lt Lion Gardiner” are in the easily recognized handwriting of the elder Governor Jonathan Trumbull. The last endorsement is in pencil and gives the date when the manuscript passed from Dr. Henry Barnard to C. J. Hoadly, LL. D.

The Relation was first printed in 1833 by the Massachusetts Historical Society. The original manuscript and a copy of it made in part by Governor Trumbull, Sr., were placed by his grandson, William T. Williams, in the hands of the Publishing Committee of that Society. iams also furnished the Committee with other early manuscripts relating to the Indians, which were printed in the same volume that the Relation appeared in. It was understood that these papers had formerly belonged to the Connecticut branch of the Winthrop family.

In the note prefixed to the Relation as printed by the Society, their Committee said that “on account of the difficulty the printer would find in deciphering the original,” they had “followed the orthography of the copy, excepting in the proper names, where they thought it of more importance to adhere to the ancient orthography.” Gardener’s narrative has been reprinted at least five times since then but in every instance the text of the above version has been reproduced without change. The present edition alone gives the Relation exactly as it appears in Gardener’s own manuscript, and a comparison with any of the previous issues will show how extensively, in orthography and other details, the original differs from the version hitherto printed. This fact may be considered a justifiable raison d’être for the present edition.

For more than half a century following its publication, in 1833, no mention is anywhere made of the whereabouts of this original manuscript, even the fact of its existence being unknown to the public at large. At least one historical writer made an unsuccessful search for it throughout New England. Its endorsements only partially show the sequence of its ownership; they give no clue as to where it was the greater part of the time between 1840 and 1896, when it was given to Dr. C. J. Hoadly, president of the Connecticut Historical Society, by the Hon. Henry Barnard, an ex-president of the same society. The copy of the manuscript made by Governor Trumbull, the elder, is, and has been ever since the receipt of the papers in 1840, among the Trumbull-Williams manuscripts in the Connecticut Historical Society, but when and in what manner the original became separated from the copy cannot now be stated. Its previous history may, however, be traced or inferred with tolerable sureness. It is certain that the manuscript early reached the hands of Governor John Winthrop, Jr. The next indications of ownership among its endorsements are the handwriting of Jonathan Trumbull, Sr., and the statement by William T. Williams that he found it among his uncle's papers in 1809. No evidence is forthcoming to show where it was during the century intervening between Winthrop's death, in 1676, and the time when it may be supposed to have come into the elder Trumbull's possession, but there is nothing inherently improbable in assuming that it lay undisturbed among the mass of papers accumulated by four generations of the Winthrop family in New London. We do not know positively when or how Governor Trumbull obtained it, but we do know that it was once in his famous collection. And as the manuscripts in his possession at the time of his decease constituted one of the most important gatherings of documents ever brought together in this country, it may not be inappropriate to give here a somewhat detailed account of the formation, dispersal, and subsequent history of the "Trumbull Papers," as it forms a most interesting chapter in the annals of American historical archives.

At the outset of the Susquehannah controversy the officials of the colony found themselves hampered by a lack of important documents, deeds of conveyance, and other records which they thought should naturally have been found in the public archives. At its October session in 1769 the Assembly appointed Governor Trumbull and George Wyllys, Secretary of the State, a committee "to make diligent search after all deeds of conveyance relative to the title of the lands granted by the Crown to this colony by the royal charter," and in May, 1770, the committee not having reported, "they are requested to make further search about the premises and to report what they may discover." In October of the same year the request was repeated.

Trumbull, always prudent and far-sighted, apparently thought that the lesson taught by this case should not be lost, for, in a message to the General Assembly in 1770 he took occasion to urge that it provide that "all papers and files belonging to the Colony" should be "collected, sorted, and deposited in a proper manner, in one place," as necessary for the government and for use on all future occasions. The Assembly promptly acceded to his suggestion by passing the following broad and explicit resolution:

"This Assembly do appoint Gurdon Saltonstall, Esq., and Capt. Joseph Trumbull to enquire after and collect all the public letters and other papers relating to the affairs of this Colony which properly belong to the Colony, in whose custody soever the same may be found, (except those in the hands of his Honor the present Governor or in the Secretary's office,) and properly sort, arrange and file the same, according to the order of the time in which they were written, and write on each file the sort of papers it contains and the year they belong to, and lodge the same with the Secretary."

This resolution was succeeded by another in May, 1771, in which the Governor himself was "desired to collect all the publick letters and papers which may hereafter in any way affect the interest of this Colony and have the same bound together, that they may be preserved"; a resolution which, in effect, added Governor Trumbull to the committee previously appointed.

That the committee set to work and diligently carried out the Assembly's instructions, is now known with certainty. In a letter written at Hartford under date of June 6, 1771, Joseph Trumbull, writing to ex-Governor Fitch, cited the above Resolve of the Assembly as his authority, and said: “I have Collected the most or all I can find or hear off, except those in Your Honor's keeping, which the distance & difficulty of Transportation during the Winter, has prevented . . . I have therefore desired the Fav' of Mr. Tho' Belden, to wait on Your Hon[or] & Consult the most convenient & least expensive manner of Transp[or]-tations, & Advise me accordingly.”

Writing from New London on February 12, 1772, to Joseph Trumbull, his colleague, Gurdon Saltonstall forwarded for Governor Trumbull some papers relating to Indian affairs and the Hopkins legacy, and said: “Mr. Winthrop" when he collects anything material, acquaints the Governor of it — & no doubt will continue in the same practice.”

In this last sentence we also get a possible inkling of the source through which the Governor obtained some of the precious Winthrop papers in his collection. At one time he had the two earliest of the three original manuscripts of the elder Winthrop’s History of New England, “besides many other papers of the sons and grandsons of this father of the chief Colony.”

Lastly, in the Connecticut State archives, Finance & Currency, V, doc. 82a, in Governor Trumbull's account of contingent expenses rendered in 1774, there is an item showing Green, the official printer's charge of 5s. 6d. “for binding D'. Johnson's Letters.” These were the letters written to Governors Pitkin and Trumbull by William Samuel Johnson during his agency in England, from 1767 to 1771, as the colony's representative in the Susquehannah case. This bound volume was afterwards found among Governor Trumbull's papers. Its contents have been printed in the Collections of the Massachusetts Historical Society.

These three items of documentary evidence conclusively show that the Committee gathered what papers it could trace as fairly coming under the head of official documents; that it forwarded to the Governor such as he had immediate need of, and that he himself arranged those in his possession relating to the Susquehannah Case and had them bound at the expense of the state. No report of the Committee is known to be extant and there is no record of its collections ever having been formally transferred to the archives of the Secretary of the State. It is extremely probable that most of the papers thus gathered were turned over to Governor Trumbull for final arrangement, filing, and binding in accordance with the Resolution of the Assembly. But the exciting events of the Revolution soon followed thick and fast; both the Resolve and the Committee were naturally lost sight of and forgotten; many papers that had been collected doubtless remained in the Governor's hands and, together with his own private papers, drafts, and copies of official documents, made up the splendid collection which, upon his death in 1785, passed to his heirs.

In April, 1794, David Trumbull, Esq., third son of Jonathan Trumbull, Sr., addressed the following letter to the Massachusetts Historical Society at Boston:

The Reverend Jeremy Belknap, Corresponding Secretary of the Massachusetts Historical Society, Boston.

Sir,

My Father, the late Governor Trumbull collected with care, the most important official papers which pass'd thro his hands, during the very interesting Period of the Revolution, with the intention that they should be preserv'd & deposited in some public Library, as materials for future Historians.

Had the Massachusetts Historical Society existed during his Life, there is no doubt but He would have chosen to give them to an Institution whose Patriotic Views they would so directly subserve in preference to a Collegiate or other Library, where they probably would soon become "Food for Worms."

His Heirs therefore, think they cannot so well fulfill the Governor's intentions on this subject, as by Offering them, as I am commissioned to do— to the Massachusetts Historical Society.

You will be pleas'd to Communicate this Offer to the Society in Our names:— permitting us to suggest the propriety of their sending some person to make a selection of such papers as may be thought most usefull:— Should it be thought an object worth your personal attention. We shall be happy to give you the best evidences in our power of the Respect which we especially have for you.

I am Sir
Your most Obedient Servant
David Trumbull.

Lebanon 15th April 1794.
Revd J. Belknap.\(^\text{*}^\)17

This letter was read at a meeting of the Society on June 11, 1794. The offer was gratefully accepted and the Corresponding Secretary instructed to write a letter of thanks to David Trumbull, informing him at the same time that a representative of the Society would be sent to Connecticut as soon as possible to make a selection.

One of the members, Judge William Wetmore of Boston, who was then in Connecticut, was requested to go to Lebanon and do this, but it does not appear that he was able to comply with the request, for at a meeting of the Society, April 28, 1795, it was voted, "That Dr. Belknap be requested to take a journey to Lebanon for the purpose of inspecting the papers of the late Governor Trumbull, and that the Society engage to bear one half the expense of the journey.” On July 30 Dr. Belknap reported that he had been to Lebanon, examined the books and papers, a general list of which he read, and stated that they would be sent forward by the packet in August. They did not arrive, however, until some months later, for in Dr. Belknap’s interleaved almanac for 1795 under date of December 12, is the following entry: “Arrived at my house the chests and boxes of papers from Governor Trumbull’s, at Lebanon. They were sent from Norwich, carted across Cape Cod, and thence brought up to Boston in a vessel from Barnstable.”

The Society has always regarded the Trumbull Papers as among the most precious in its archives and has pursued a generous policy in granting the use of them to historical investigators. The manuscripts have been arranged, indexed, and bound up into volumes, now thirty in number. One was unfortunately burned in 1825 while temporarily in the office of Mr. James Savage, who was then preparing for the press Winthrop’s History of New England and had taken several rare volumes from the Society’s Library for consultation, all of which were lost in the Court Street conflagration. But Mr. Savage stated that the most valuable portion of the Trumbull volume had already been printed in the first volume of the Third Series of the Society’s Collections. Others of the Trumbull Papers, viz., the letters of William Samuel Johnson, of Colonel Jedidiah Huntington, and the correspondence of Washington with Governor Trumbull, Sr., have also been printed by the Society.

While Dr. Belknap undoubtedly selected the most valuable part of the papers offered by the Trumbull heirs, there seems to have still remained in the family's possession a considerable and by no means unimportant mass of documents. Upon the death of Governor Jonathan Trumbull, Jr., in 1809, these appear to have passed to William Trumbull Williams, Esq., a nephew, who had made his ties of relationship to the Trumbull family still closer by marrying an own cousin, the daughter of David Trumbull, younger brother of Jonathan. As noted above, it was Mr. Williams who found Gardener's manuscript of the Relation among his uncle's papers and loaned it, with the elder Governor Trumbull's copy, to the Massachusetts Historical Society for publication.

In 1840 the Trumbull family presented to the Connecticut Historical Society a large number of manuscripts, papers, and books. These included what remained of the original Trumbull collection, together with the family papers of William T. Williams, Esq., and of his father, William Williams, the “Signer.” Messrs. Charles Hosmer and Henry Barnard visited Lebanon as the official representatives of the society, and the papers were formally transferred to them in December, 1840, by Larned Hubbard, Esq., administrator of the estate of William T. Williams. They were sent into Hartford consigned to Mr. Barnard. Their arrival, and the society’s just pride in so rich an acquisition, are indicated in a letter of Thomas Day, president of the society, to ex-Governor John Cotton Smith, written December 16, 1840: “We have lately received from the administrator of the late Wm. T. Williams of Lebanon three large trunks filled with original letters and other documents that belonged to the first Gov. Trumbull and his son-in-law Col. Wm. Williams. Among them are letters to and from Gov. Saltonstall, Gov. Talcott, Gov. Law, Gov. Roger Wolcott, the first Gov. Trumbull, and others. We now feel that we have got something that those who come after us will think worth taking care of.”21 At a meeting of the society January 15, 1841, a cordial vote of thanks to “the heirs of His Excellency, Jonathan Trumbull, Senior,” was passed, and the society’s appreciation of the valuable donation suitably recorded.

Some years after the Trumbull-Williams manuscripts had been presented to the Connecticut Historical Society, an incident occurred which has its parallels in the history of other notable private collections after their final dispersal. At its May session in 1845 the General Assembly of Connecticut formally laid claim to the Trumbull Papers in the possession of the Massachusetts Historical Society. The reasons for this action were embodied in the following resolution:

Whereas, it is understood and believed by the General Assembly now in session, that numerous official letters and valuable correspondence intimately connected with executive and legislative acts of this State, during an important and interesting period of its history, was collected by His Excellency Governor Trumbull, during his administration, and which, in the opinion of this Assembly, ought to have been deposited in the office of the Secretary of this State, but are now in the possession of the Massachusetts Historical Society; and,

Whereas, it is proper and desirable that said documents, &c., be obtained from said Society and deposited with the Secretary of this State; therefore,

Resolved, That His Excellency the Governor be and he is hereby requested to adopt such measures as may be proper and expedient to obtain possession of the letters, correspondence, and documents above referred to, and the same to deposit for safe-keeping in the office of the Secretary of this State, in Hartford.

This resolve was duly communicated to the society by Governor Roger S. Baldwin, and it was read before the members at a meeting held on September 12, 1845. After some discussion, a committee was appointed to take the matter into consideration and report on it. The committee consisted of Messrs. I. P. Davis, Josiah Quincy, and James Savage. They reported in December, but for some reason or other it was voted to recommit the report, and in the following January they presented another. This was rather high-sounding in tone, but shrewdly drawn and worded. The society accepted it and ordered a copy sent to the Secretary of the State of Connecticut.

The report of the committee maintained "that it would hardly be presumed that the Governor of any independent Commonwealth would have withdrawn from the public archives large masses of official original documents, and transported the same a distance of many miles from the seat of government . . . unto his own home in a remote town"; it asserted that the collection was surely the gathering of a lifetime, and had always been regarded as private property by Governor Trumbull, and also by his heirs, in whose undisturbed possession it had remained for ten years after his death; that the papers of his predecessors in the office of Governor amounted to but a very small portion of the whole, and were, indeed, mostly private in nature, or else triplicate copies and not such complete documents as should be found in official archives. "Wherefore, the Committee conclude with a decided judgement that the opinion of the Assembly of Connecticut . . . is founded on a mistaken assumption; and that the exalted character of Governor Trumbull, and of his four immediate predecessors in the chair of chief magistrate of that Colony, may, in all future time, be confidently referred to as adequate and perfect vindication from the consequences of such assumption; and they recommend in conclusion, that the trust of this Society in preservation of the papers usually called the 'Trumbull Papers' be ever sacredly fulfilled." 22

Some of the points in this report were indisputable, but the first, and perhaps the most important one, was very far from being so. Governor Trumbull did take large numbers (not necessarily masses) of official documents from the public archives, and he certainly did have them at his home in Lebanon, "many miles from the seat of government." Many expressions in his letters show this. For example, writing to Wyllys from Lebanon on August 17, 1770, in regard to the Mohegan case, he says, "I cannot find this passage in the Comifts' Book with me"; in the same letter reference is made to another important document of a public nature which he then had. In November, 1770, writing from the same place to the same official, he says: "I have Sent my Son, with The Book of Records of the doings & proceedings of the Comifts of the four United Colonies of N. E.," and at the close of the letter he adds, "please to return the Records, as well as the Copies &c." Early in the previous month, as appears from still another letter, he had sent certain records and documents to Secretary Wyllys, thinking them needful to be laid before the General Assembly at New Haven. But the Governor had these papers for perfectly legitimate purposes, as, for example, in drawing up the argument for the colony in the Susquehannah case, and was acting clearly within his official rights in borrowing them from the office of the Secretary of the State. Nor was this an unusual thing, or a privilege exclusively granted to public officials. The General Assembly at one time granted the historian, Benjamin Trumbull, permission to borrow such State records as he desired to make use of, and retain them for a period of six months if needed. In fact, to any one acquainted with the reckless ways in which records and public papers were loaned, borrowed, and transported from place to place in colonial and even later times, it is a cause for wonder that so many have been preserved. Hence the major point in the Massachusetts Society's argument was not well taken.

Their position, however, was greatly strengthened by the weakness of the reply to the committee's report made by Governor Baldwin in behalf of Connecticut's claim. In repudiating the committee's implied charge of casting reflections on Governor Trumbull's character, he was obliged to admit that it had been the custom in Connecticut for the chief magistrate to keep in his own possession the papers of his administration pertaining to the executive department. It is true that he contended that this fact would not account for the presence in the Trumbull collection of the papers of former administrations. These, he claimed, were the result of the collections made by direction of the General Assembly under the authority of their various resolutions. This assumption, though a fair one, cannot be proven conclusively. Long-established usage had made official correspondence and similar documents the personal property of the Governor, who retained them when he passed out of office. The papers of former Governors that were turned over to Trumbull were given up voluntarily, and without doubt as a matter of courtesy, not as an obligation; though it may, indeed, have been understood that they were ultimately to go to the State. Of this, however, there is no direct evidence. So far as these personal papers are concerned, by no construction of law or custom were they ever the actual property of Colony or State, or at any time in the State's custody. Governor Baldwin's position on this point was clearly untenable.

At a meeting on May 28, 1846, the society referred the matter to the same committee for further consideration, and in the following November they brought in a second report, which rather indicates that their feelings had gotten the best of their judgment. They asserted that the simple fact that the papers had been in the undisputed possession of the society for more than fifty years was of itself a sufficient answer to such a claim. "They remain in its Library, accessible . . . to all proper applicants; and copies of any of them may be taken by the State of Connecticut." 29

But the committee fell into error when it maintained that the resolution of the colonial assembly requesting Governor Trumbull to collect such State papers as he could find, and arrange and bind them for public use, was merely suggested by "the well known fact that Governor Trumbull was a most diligent collector of all sorts of manuscripts." The real reasons for the Assembly’s action have been given above. The committee’s further statements, "that to fulfill this request was no part of his official duty," and that "it is certain that he never complied with the request, at least so far as these papers are concerned; and there is no evidence that he ever agreed or intended to do so," 30 were quite too sweeping and gratuitous. It certainly is part of an official’s duty to execute the mandates of the legislature, and the evidence adduced above in connection with the Assembly’s resolutions in 1770 and 1771 quite disproves the committee’s hasty assertions. In conclusion, their report recommended the adoption of the following vote:

Voted, that the Historical Society of Massachusetts, having most respectfully considered the application of the State of Connecticut for the collection of papers, arranged and bound up by the said Society, and by them called the Trumbull Papers, beg leave to decline complying with it, being of opinion that it is their duty to preserve the same in their own Library, in conformity with the will of the donors.

The society voted unanimously "that the report of the Committee be accepted, and the vote they recommend be adopted." No further action seems to have been taken by the State of Connecticut, and the matter was dropped.

Such is the history of the famous collection of papers to which the original manuscript of Gardener's Relation once belonged, prior to its acquisition by Mr. Henry Barnard, who later gave it to Dr. Charles J. Hoadly. The latter, recognizing the importance of placing its text, exactly as written, in the hands of historical students, offered the use of it to the Acorn Club, of which he was an honorary member. But before the printing of it could be undertaken, Dr. Hoadly died, and the manuscript passed into the hands of his brother and executor, George E. Hoadley, who kindly continued the previous permission to the Club to make use of the manuscript for the purposes of this edition. It may also be mentioned here that Dr. Hoadly left a memorandum directing that the manuscript be presented to the library of Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut, of which he was a distinguished graduate.

The proofs of the following pages have been compared throughout with the original manuscript, by Mr. Albert C. Bates, librarian of the Connecticut Historical Society.

Lion Gardener
In the yeare 1635 I Lione Gardener Engineer & Master of works of fortification in the legers of the prince of Orang in the Low cuntries through the p'swation of Mr John Dauenport Mr Hugh Peters with some other well affected Englishmen of Rotterdam; I made an agreement with the forenamed Mr Peters for 100 p's annum for 4 years to serve the company of patentees, Namely the Lord Say, the Lord Brooks, Sir Arthur Hazilrig, Sir Mathew Bonnington, Sir Richard Saltingstone, Esquire ffenwick, and the rest of the company, (I say, I was to serve them only in the drawing, ordering, & Making of a Cittie, Townes, or forts of defence: And so I came from Holland to London, and from thence to New England, where I was appointed to attend Such orders as Mr John Winthrop Esquire the present Gouernor of Conestecott was to appoint, whether at the river or Conestecott and y't we should choose a place both for the conveniencie of a good harbor and also for capablenes and fitness for fortification: But I landing at Bolton the latter end of November the aforesaid Mr Winthrop had sent before one Leuten: Gibbons Sergiant Willard with some carpenters to take possession of y's rivers mouth, whear they began to build houses against the Spring, wee expecting according to promise y't there would have come from England to us 300 able men whereof 200 should attend fortification, 50 to till y's ground & 50 to build houses but our great expectation at the rivers mouth came only to 2 men, viz. Mr ffenwick, and his man who came With Mr. Hugh Peters, and Mr. Oldham & Tho. Stanton bringing with them some otterskin coats and Beuer and scaines of wampum which the Pequits had sent for a present becauf the English had required the Pequits had killed a virginnean one Capt. Stone with his Barks crew in conedectecott river, for they said they would have their lives & not their presents, then I answered seing you will take Mr Winthrop to ye Bay to see his wife Newly brought to bed of her first child, and though you Say he shall returne, yet I know if you make war wi[th] thes Pequits he will not come hither again, for I know you will keepe your selves against Capt. hung and let fortification alone awhile, safe as you think in the bay but myselfe with thes few you will leaue at the stake to be rofted or for hung[er] to be starued, for Indean corn is now 12° bushell and we haue but 3 akers planted, and if they will now make war for a virginnian and expose us to the Indiens whos mercies are cruel they I say, they loue the virginians better than us, for haue they stayed thes 4 or 5 yeas and wil they begin now we being so few in the riuer and haue scarce holes to put our heds in I pray ask the Magistrats in the bay, if they haue forgot w't I said to the W I returned from Salem! for Mr Winthrop, Mr. Haines, Mr. Dudley, Mr. Ludlow, Mr. Humfry, Mr. Belingam, Mr. Coddington, & Mr. Nowell, thes entreated me to goe with Mr. Humfry & Mr. Peters to vew the Cuntrie to see how fit it was for fortification, and I tould them y't Nature had done more then halfe the worke alredie & yt I thought no foraigne potent enemie would doe th- any hurt, but one yt was neare, the asked me who that was & I said it was Cap't Hung't that threatened them most, for, said I war is like a 3 footed ftoole, want one foot and down cums all and thes 3 feet are men, victuals, & munition, therfore seing in peace you are like to be famishedd wt will or can be done if war, therfore I thinke said I it will be best only to fight and if need hereafter require it I can come to doe you any service, and they all liked my saying well, entreat them to rest awhile till wee get more strength here about vs, and yt we here where the seat of y' war will be; may approve of it & prouide for it, for I had but 24 in all men women & boyes & girls, and not food for th- for 2 moneths vnles we faued our corne field, which could not possibily be if they came to war, for it is 2 miles from our home: Mr winthrop Mr ffenwick & Mr peters promised me that they would doe th' utmost Indeavour to persuade the bay men to desist from war a yeare or 2 till we could be better prouided for it, and then the Pequit Sachem was sent for, and the present returned, but full fore against my will, So they 3 returned to Boston and 2 or 3 dayes after came an Indean from pequit, whof name was cocommithus who had liued at Plimmoth and could speake good English, he desired yt Mr Steuen winthrop would goe to pequit with an 100's worth of trucking cloth and all other trading ware for they knew yt we had a great cargoe of goods of Mr Pincheons & Mr Steuen Winthrop had ye disposing of it [3] And he said yt if he would come he might put off all his goods and the pequid Sachem would give him two horses yt had been there a great while, So I sent the shallop with Mr Steuen winthrop Sargeant Tille who we cald afterward Sargeant kettle becau$e he put the kettle on his hed, & Tho Hurlbut and 3 men more charging them yt they should ride in ye middle of ye rier & not goe arihore vntill they had done all th' trade and yt Mr Steuen winthrop should stand in ye hould of ye boate hauing th' guns by them & fwords by th' sides, the oth' 4 to be 2 in the fore Cuddie & 2 in aft being armed in like maner yt to they out of the loope holes might cleare the boat if they wear by the pequits asalted, and yt they should let but one canoe cum abord at once with no more but 4 Indeans in her, & w she had traded th there an oth', and yt they shold lie no longer there then one day and at night to goe out of the riuer, and if they brought the two horses to take them in at a cleare piece of land at ye mouth of ye riuer, 2 of them goe arihore to help the horses in and ye rest stand reddie with th' guns in th' hands if need were to defend them from ye pequits for I durft not trust them, So they went & found but little trade, and they hauing forgotten w' I charged them, Tho Hurlbut and one went arihore to Boyle the kettle and Tho Hurlbut steping into ye Sachems wigwam not far from ye shore enquiring for ye horses, ye Indeans went out of ye wigwam, and Wuncumbone his Mothers sifter was then the great Pequot Sachems wife who made signes to him yt he should be gone for they would cut off his hed which he perceiued he drew his sword & ran to y° oth° and got abord, and immediately came abundance of Indeans to y° wat° side and cald them to cum aфhore but they immediatly fet saile and came home, and this causfed me to keepe watch and ward for I saw they plotted our destruction / & suddenly after came Cap't Endecott, Cap't Turner, & Cap't Vndrill with a companie of Souldiers well fitted to Seabrook and made y° place th° rendeuow or feat of war and y° to my great griefe for said I you come hith° to raife thes wasps about my eares, and then you will take wing and flee away, but, when I had seen th° commi5ion I wondered and made many allegations against the Manner of it, but goe they did to pequit and as they came without aquainting any of vs in y° riuer with it So they went against our will, for I knew y° I should looфе our corne field, then I entreated the to heare w° I would say to them which was this, Sirs, Seing you will goe I pray you if you doe not loade yo° barkes with Pequits loade them with corne for y° is now gath°ed with them & dry redie to put into th° barns, and both you & we haue need of it, and I will send my shallop and hire this duchmans boate there p°sent to goe with you, and if you can not attain yo° end of y° pequits yet you may load yo° barkes with corn which will be wellcome to Boston and to me, but they said they had no bags to load them with, then said I here is 3 dozen of new bags you shal haue 30 of them and my shallop to carie them, & 6 of them my men shall use themselves, for I will with ye duchmen send 12 men well pruised, and desired them to devide the men into 3 parts, viz 2 parts to stand without the corne and to defend the other \( \frac{1}{3} \) part ye carry the corn to ye water side, till they have loaden w't they can and ye men ther in armes \( \text{w} \) the rest are abord, shall in order goe abord, ye rest ye are abord Shall with th' armes clear the shore if ye pequits doe alit them in ye rear, and then \( \text{w} \) the Generall shall display his collers all to set faile togeath'. To this motion they all agreed, and I put ye 3 dozen of bags abord my Shallop and away they went, and demaunded ye pequit Sachem to cum into parle but it was returned for answer ye he was from home but within 3 hours he would cum and so from 3. to 6. & thence to 9. ther came none, but the Indeans came without armes to our men in great numbers, & they talked with my men whom they knew but in the end at a word giuen they all on a sudden ran away from our men as they stood in ranke and file and not an Indean more was to be seen; and all this while before they caried all th' stuff away and thus was ye great parley ended, then they displayed th' collers & beat their drums, burnt sum wigwams and sum heapes of corne, and my men caried as much abord as they could but the armie went abord leauing my men ahaore Which ought to haue marched abord first, but they all set faile and my men were purfueld by the Indeans, and they hurt sum of the Indeans, and two of th' came home

wounded, the bay men kild not a man saue yt one kichomiquin an Indean Sachem of ye bay kild a pequit, and thus began the wars between the Indeans and vs in thes prts: So my men being cum home and hauing brought a prittie quantitie of corn with them, they Informed me both duch and English of all passages, I was glad of ye corn: After this I immediately tooke men and went to our cornfield to gathr our corn, apoynting others to cum about with the shallop and fetch it, and left 5 lustie men in ye strong houf with long guns, which houf I had built for the defence of the corn, now thes men not regarding the charg I had giuen them, 3 of them went a mile from ye houf a foaling; and hauing loaded themselues with foule they returned, but ye pequits let them pas first till they had loaded themselues, but at th returne they arose out of th ambuſ[h] and Shot them all 3. one of them escaped through ye corn Shot through the legge ye othr 2 they tormented, then the next day I sent ye shallop to fetch ye men and ye reit of ye corn, ye was broken downe and they found but 3 as is above faid, and W they had gotten yt, they left ye reit and as soone as they were gone a little way from Shoare they saw the houſe on fire, Now so soone as ye boat came home and brought vs this bad newes, old Mr Michell was verie vrgent with me to lend him the boat to fetch hay home from ye 6. mile Iland, but I tould him they weare to few men, for his 4 men could but carrie the hay abord and one mutt ſtãd in the boat to defend them and

they must have 2 more at the foot of the rocke, with th\textsuperscript{r} guns to keepe the Indeans from running downe upon them. and in the first place before they carry any of ye cocks of hay to scour ye Meaddow with th\textsuperscript{r} 3 doggs to march al abreast from ye low\textsuperscript{r} end vp to ye rock, and if they found the meaddow cleare, then to load th\textsuperscript{r} hay: but this was allfo negleced, for they all went afhoare and fell to carrying of th\textsuperscript{r} hay, and the Indeans presentely rose out of ye long graffe and kild 3, and tooke the broth\textsuperscript{r} of Mr Michell who is ye Minift\textsuperscript{r} of Cambridge, and roited him alike; and So they Serued a shallop of his cuming downe the riuer in the spring, hauing 2 men one wherof they kild at .6. mile Iland ye oth\textsuperscript{r} came downe drowned to vs afhoare at our doores, wth an arrow shot into his eye through his head

In ye 22\textsuperscript{th} of februarie I went out with 10 men and 3 doggs half a mile from the house to burne the weeds leaues and reedes vpon the neck of land, becaus we had feld 20 timber trees which we weare to roule to ye wat\textsuperscript{r} side to bring home euerie man carrying a length of Match with brimstone Matches with him to kindle the fier withall, but \textit{w} we came to ye small of ye Neck ye reeds burning, I hauing before this set 2 fentinells on ye small of ye Neck, I called to ye men ye weare burning the reeds to cum away, but they would not vntill they had buft vp the rest of th\textsuperscript{r} matches, presentely th\textsuperscript{r} starts vp 4 Indeans out of ye fierie reeds, but ran away, I calling to ye rest of our men to cum away out of ye Marth; Then Robert Chapman and Tho Hurlbut being Sentenells called to me, Saying ther came a numbr of IndeHs out of ye othr side of ye Marth, then I went to stop them that they should not get ye woodland, but Tho Hurlbut cried out to me yt sum of the men did not follow me, for Tho Rumble & Arthur branch threw downe th2 guns and ran away, then the Indeans shot 2 of them yt weare in the reeds, and Sought to get between vs & home but durft not cum before vs, but kept vs in a halfe moone, we retreating, & exchanging many a shot, So yt Tho Hurlbut was shot almost through the thigh John Spencer in the back into his kidneyes myself into the thigh, 2 more weare shot dead; but in our retreate I kept Hurlbut and Spencer still before vs, we defending our felues with our naked swords or els they had taken vs all alioe, So yt yt 2 orre wounded men by our flow retreat got home with th2 guns, w our 2 Sound men ran away and left th2 guns behind them, but w I saw ye cowards yt left vs, I resolued to let draw lots which of them should be hanged, for the articles did hang vp in the haule for them to read and they knew they had been published long before, but at ye Interceffion of old Mr Michell, Mr Higgffon and Mr Pell I did forbeare; Within a few dayes aft when I had cured myself of my wound I went out with 8 men to get some foule for our reliefe and found ye guns yt weare throune away, and the bodie of one man shot through, the arrow going in at ye right side, ye hed sticking fast halfe through a rib at the left side which I tooke out and clenfed it and prfumed to sind to ye bay, becauf they had faid yt ye arrowes of ye Indeans weare of no force. Anthonie Dike Maftr of a barke, hauing his barke at Road Iland in the wint was fent by Mr Vane, then Gouern'r, Anthonie came to Road Iland by land and from thence he came with his barke to me with a letter, wherein was defired yt I shoule considr and prfcribe the beft way I could to quell thes pequots which I allfo did, and with my lett fent ye mans rib for a token A few dayes after came Tho Stanton downe the Riuер and Staying for a wind, while he was theare came a troupe of Indeans within Mufket fhot laying themfelues and th' armes downe behind a little rifing hill & 2 great trees, which I perceiuing called the Carpent'r whom I had Shewed how to charge and leuell a gun & yt he fould put 2 Cartriges of mufket bullets into 2 Sakers guns yt lay about and we leuelled th' againft the place, and I tould him yt he muſt looke towards me, and when he faw me waue my hat above my head he fould giue fire to both the guns, then prfently came 3 Indeans creeping out and calling to vs to fpeake with vs, & I was glad yt Tho Stant'o was theare, and I fent .6. men downe by the garden pales, to looke yt none fhould cum vnder the hill behind vs, and hauing placed the reft in places conuenient clofely, Tho & I with my fword pitfoll & carbine went 10 or 12 poale without ye gate to parlee with them [5] And when ye fix men came to ye garden pales at ye corner they found a great numbr of Indeans creeping behind ye fort or betwixt vs and home, but they ran away. Now I had said to Thomas Stanton w't foeuer they say to you tell me first for we will not answer y'm directly to any thing; for I know not y'e mind of y'e rest of y'e English: So they came forth calling vs nearer to th', & we th' nearer to vs: but I would not let Thomas goe any furth'r then y'e great flump of a tree, and I flood by him then they asked who we weare, and he answered Thomas and Lieffennat but they said he lied for I was Shott with many arrowes and So I was but my buff Coate preserved mee; only one hurt mee, but W I spake to y'm they knew my voyce for one of th- had dwelt 3 moneths with vs but ran away W the bay men came first: Then they asked vs if we would fight with Niantecut Indeans, for they weare our frends & came to trade we said we knew not the Indeans one from anoth'r and therfore would trade with none, then they said have you fought ynough, we said we knew not yet. then they asked if we did vse to kill women & chil'dre we said they should see y't heraft'r, So they weare silent a small space and then they said we are pequits and haue killed Englishmen and can kill them as musketoes, & we will goe to cone'ectcott and kill men women & children and we will take away y'e horfes Cowes & hoggs / When Tho Stanton had tould me this he praid me to shoot y't Rogue for said he, he hath an Englishmans coat on and Saith y't he hath killed 3 and thes oth'r 4 haue th' cloaths on th' backs, I said no, it is not the manner of a parlee but haue patience, and I shall fit them ere they goe, Nay now or neuer said he, so w he could get no oth’ anwer but this laft I bid him tell them y’ should not goe to coneëtecott for if they did kill all the men and take all y’ rest as they said it would doe them no good, but hurt for English women are lazie and cannot doe th’ work horses and Cowes will spoyle yo’ cornefields, and y’ hogs th’ clam banks and So vndoe them: Then I poyned to our great house: and bid him tell them there lay 20 pieces of truding cloath of Mr pinions with howes hatchets and all manner of trade, they were bett’ fight fill with vs and so get all y’, & then goe vp the riever after they after they had killed all vs; hauing herd this they weare mad as doggs and ran away: Then w they came to y’ place from whence they came I waued my hatt about my head, and y’ 2 great guns went off, So y’ there was a great hubbub amongt them

Then 2 dayes after came downe Cap’ Mason & Sergeant Seely with 5 men more to see how it was with vs, and whilft they weare theare came downe a duch boat telling vs the Indeans had kild 14 English for by that boute I had sent vp letters to coneëtecott w’ I herd and w’ I thought and how to pruent y’ threatened dang’, and receiued back again rath’ a scab than any thanks for my care and pains, but as I wroat so it fell out to my great grief and theirs, for the next or 2nd day aft’ as Maior Mason well knowes came downe a great many Canoes going downe the crick beyond y’ Marsh before the fort many of them hauing wht shirts, then I cumanded the carpent'r whom I had shewed to leuell great guns to put in 2 round-shot into y'e 2 fackers and we leuelled them at a fertaine place, and I stood to bid him giue fire W I thought the canoe would meet the bullet, and one of them tooke off y'e nose of a great Canoe wherein the 2 maids weare y^t weare taken by the Indeans whom I redeemed & cloathed, for the duchmen whom I sent to fetch them brought them away allmost Naked from pequit they putting on th^t owne linnen Jackets to couer th^t Nakednes, and though the redemption cost me 10" I am yet to haue thanks for my care and charge about them thes things are knowne to Maior Maifon.

Then came from the bay Mr Tille with a pink to goe vp to Harford and cuming ahoare he faw a paper nailed vp ouer the gate wheron was written y^t noe boat or barke shold pass y^e fort but y^t they came to an anchhor firit y^t I might see wheth'r they weare armed and mand sufficientely and they weare not to land any wheare after they passed the fort till they came to wetherfield and this I did becauf Mr Michell had loft a schallop before cuming downe from wetherfield w^th 3 men well armd, this Mr Tille gau me ill language for my prsumption as he called it w^th oth'r expre'sions to long here to write, W he had done I bid him goe to his ware house which he had built before I came to fetch his goods from thence for I would watch no long^r ouer it, So he knowing nothing went, and found his house burnt, and one of Mr Plums w^th oth'r's and he toould me to my face y^t I had caused it to be done, but Mr Higgiffon, Mr. Pell Tho Hurlbut & John Green can witnes yt the same day our house was burnd at cornfield poynt I went wth Mr Higgiffon Mr. Pell & 4 men more broake open y° door and tooke a noate of all y° was in y° house and gaue it to Mr Higgiffon to keepe and so brought all the goods to our hous and deliuerd it all to them again w° they came for it without any penney of charge Now y° verie next day after I had taken the goods out before the fun was quit down [6] And we all togeathr in y° great Haule, all them houses weare on fier in one Instnt the Indeans ran away but I would not follow them, Now w Mr Tille had receiued all his goods I said vnto him I thought I had deserued for my honest care both for thr boddies & goods of thes y° past by heare at y° leaft bestr language and am resolued to order such Mallepert persons as you are, therfore I wish you and allso charge you to obserue yt wch you haue red at ye gate, tis my dutie to god, My Masters, and my loue I beare to you all which is the ground of this had you but eyes to see it, but you will not till you feele it, So he went vp the riuer, and w he came downe again to his place which I called Tilles ffolle, now called Tilles poynt, in our fight in dispight hauing a faire wind he came to an anchor and with one man more went afoare discharged his gun and y° Indeans fell vpon him and kild the othr, and caried him alioe ouer the riuer in our fight before my thollop could cum to them for immediately I sent 7 men to fetch y° pinke downe or els it had been taken & 3 men more, So they brought her downe and I sent M'r Higgefon & M'r pell abord to take an Inuoyce of all yt was in ye vessell yt nothing might be loft,— 2 dayes after came to me as I had written to Sir Henerie vane then Gouern'r of the bay I say came to me Captain vndrill with 20 luftie men well armed to stay with me 2 moneths or till Sumthing should be done about the pequits, he came at yt charge of my Masters, Soone after came downe from Harford Maior Mason, lieftennant Seely, acumpanied with M'r Stone, and 80 English men and 80 Indeans, with a Cummiffhion from M'r Ludlo and M'r Steele and Some oth's, thes came to go fight with the pequits, but Capt vnndrill and I had seen th's commiffhion, we both faid they were not fitted for fuch a designe and we faid to Maior Mason we wondred he would venture himfelfe being no bett'r fitted and he faid the Magiftrats could not or would not fend bett'r, the we faid yt none of of men fhould goe with them neyth'r fhould they go vnleff we yt weare bred fouldiers fom our youth could fee some likelihood to do better than the bay men with th's Strong commiffhion laft yeare, then I asked them how they durft truft the Mohegin Indeans who had but yt yeare come from the pequits, they faid they would truft them for they could not well goe without them for want of guids, yea faid I, but I will try them before a man of ours fhall goe with you or them, & I cald for Vncas & said vnto him you fay you will help Maior Mason but I will firft fee it, therefore fend you now 20 men to ye bass riuer, for there went yeft'night 6 Indeans in a Canoe hith'r, fetch them now dead or aliue and then you shall goe with Maior Mafon els not, So he sent his men who kild 4 brought one a traytor to vs aliue whos name was kiswas and one ran away and I gaue him 15 yards of trading Cloath on my own charge to giue vnto his men acording to th'r desert, & hauing Stayed theare 5 or 6 dayes before we could agree at laft we old Souldiers agreed about ye way and act, and tooke 20 insufficent men from ye 80 y't came from Harford, & sent them vp again in a shollop, and Captain Vndrill with 20 of ye lustiess of our men went in th'r roome, and I furnisht them with such things as they wanted & sent Mr Pell the surgeo with them, and ye Lord God blessed th'r designe & way so y't they returned with victorie to ye glorie of God & hon'r of our Nation hauing slaine 300 burd th'r fort & taken many prifoners, Then came to me an Indean called wequah and I by Mr Higgeffon enquired of him how many of ye pequits wear yet aliue y't had heped to kill Engliih men & he declared them to Mr Higgeffon & he writ them downe as may apeare by his own hand here enclosed and I did as therin is written, Then 3 dayes after the fight came waiandance Next broth'r to the old Sachem of long Iland and hauing been recommended to me by Mior Gibbons he came to know if we were angrie with all Indeans, I anwered No, but only with fuch as has kild English-men, he asked me wheth'r they y't liued vpon long Iland might cum to trade with vs, I said no, nor we with them for if I should send my boate to trade for corne and you have pequits with you and if my boat should cum into sum crik by reason of bad weathr they might kill my men, & I shall thinke yt you of long Island haue done it, and So we may kill all you for ye pequits but if you will kill all the pequits yt come to you and send me th heads ye I will glie to you as to weakwañ and you shall haue trade with vs, then, Said he I wil goe to my brothr, for he is the great Sachem of all long Island and if we may haue peace and trade with you we will giue you tribute as we did the pequits, then I said if you haue any Indeans yt haue killed Engliih you must bring th heads also, he answered not any one, and said that Gibbons my brothr would haue tould you if it had been so, So he went away and did as I had said and sent me 5 heads, 3. & 4. heads for wch I paid them yt brought them as I had promised Then came Captaine Stoten with an armie of 300 men from ye bay to kill the pequits, but they wear fled beyond New hauen to a swamp, I sent Wequash after them who went by Night to spie them out and ye armie folloed him, and found them at ye great Swamp who killed sum and tooke othrs and ye rest fled to ye Mowhakues with th Sachem then ye Mohakues cut off his hed & sent it to Harford for then they all fered vs, but now it is othrwise for they say to our faces yt our commishons Meeting once a yeare and fpeake a great deale or write a lett & thers all for they deare not fight, but before they went to ye great swamp they snt Tho Stanton ouer to long Iland & Shelt' Iland to find pequits theare but there was none for ye Sachem waiandance y^t was a plimmoth \( \mathbb{W} \) ye Comilh's weare there and fet there last, I say he had kild so many of ye pequits and snt th' heds to me y^t they durft not cum there and he and his men went with ye English to ye swamp and thus ye pequits weare queld at y^t time, But there was like to be a great broyle between Miantenomie, & vnchus, who shoulde haue ye rest of ye pequits but we mediated between them and pacified them, also vnchus challenged ye Naraganfet Sachem out to a single Cumbate but he would not fight without all him men, but they weare pacified tho ye old grudg remains still as it doth apeare, Thus fare I had written in a booke y^t all men and posteriti might know how & why so many honnest men had th' bloud shed yea & sum fleid aliue oth' cut in pieces & sum rosted aliue only becaus kichamokin a bay Indean kild one pequit and thuf fare of ye pequit warre which was but a Commedie in Comparison of ye tragedies which hath been here threatned since and may yet come if God doe not open ye eyes ears & harts of some y^t I thinke are willfully deafe and blind and thinke becaus th' is no ch\( \mathbb{W} \) y^t ye vision failes and put ye euil threatned day far off for fay they we are now, 20 to one to w^t we weare then and none dare meddle with vs, Oh woe be to ye prid & securitie which hath bee ye ruine of many nations as wofull experience hath proued

But I wond' and so doth many more with me yt ye bay doth no bettr reueng ye murdering of Mr Oldham an honnest man of th' owne, feing they were at such coft for a virginnian, the Narraganfets yt weare at Block Iland kild him & had 50li of gold of his for I saw it W he had 5 peices of me and put it vp into a clout and tied it vp altogeathr W he went away from me to block Iland, but ye Narraganfets had it and punched holes into it and put it about th' necks for Jewels and afterward I saw ye duch haue sum of it wth they had of the Narraganfets at a small rate—— And now I find yt to be true which our frend Waiandance toald me many years agoe and yt was this yt feing all ye plots of ye Narraganfets weare allwayes discouered he said they would let us aloane till they had destroyed vnca and him and then they wth the mowquakes and Mowhakues and the indeans beyond ye ducht and all ye Northirne & Eastirne Indeans would esily destroy vs Man & Moth's Sonn this haue I informed the Gou'nours of thes parts But all in vaine for I see they haue done as thos of weth'field not regarding till they were impelled to it by bloud and thus we may be fure of the fatten of ye flock are like to goe firit if not all togeth r and then it wil be to late to read. Jer. 25. for drinke we Shall if ye lord be not ye more mercifull to us, for our extreame pride and base securitie which canot but flinke before ye lord, and we may expect this yt if th' shol'd bee wars againe between England & holland our ffriends at ye ducht and our duch Englishmen would proue as true to us Now as they weare \( \text{w} \) ye fleet came out of England but no more of yt, a word to ye wife is ynoough. And now I am old, I would faine die a naturall death or like a soldier in ye field with honnor and not to haue a sharp stake set in the ground and thrust into my fundament and to haue my skin flaid of by piece-meale and cut in pieces and bits and my flesh rosted and thrust downe my throat as these people haue done and I know will be done to ye chieftest in ye Cuntry by hundreds if god should deliver vs into th\( ^r \) hands as justly he may for our sins.

[8] I going ouer to Meantacut & vpon ye Easterne end of Long Iland vpon sum ocotion yt I had theare, I found 4 Naragansets theare talking with ye Sachem and his old counsellors, I askd an Indean wt they weare, he said yt they weare Naragansits & yt one was Miannemo a Sachem, wt came they for said I, he said he knew not for they talked secretly, So I departed to anothr wigwam, Shortly aft came the Sachem waiandance to me and said, doe you know wt thers came for, No said I; Then he said: they say I must giue no more wampum to the English, for they are no Sachems, nor none of th\( ^r \) children Shall be in th\( ^r \) place if they die, and they haue no tribute giuen them, ther is but one king in England who is ouer them all, and if you would send him 100000 fathams of wampum he would not give you a knife for it, nor thank you, and I said to them then they will come and kill vs all as they did ye pequits, then they said, No, the Pequits gaue them wampum and beuer, which they loued so well, but they sent it them again and killed them because they had kild an Englishman, but you have killed none therefore give them nothing. Now friend tell me w't I shall say to them for one of them is a great man. Then said I tell them y't you must go first to ye farther end of long Island and Speake with all y' rest, & a moneth hence you will give them an anfer. Meane time you may goe to Mr Haines and he will tell you w't to doe, and I will write all this now in my booke y't I haue here, and So he did, and y' Narraganfits departed, and this Sachem came to me at my house: And I wrote this Matt' to Mr Haines, and he went vp with it to Mr Haines, who forbid him to give any thing to the Narraganfit: & writ to me So: and w't they came againe they came by my Island and I knew them to be the same men: and I tould them they might goe home againe, & I gaue them Mr Haynes his letter for Mr Williams to read to ye Sachem: So they returned back again; for I had Said to them that if they would goe to Mantacut I would goe likewise with them, and y't long Island must not give wampum to Naraganfit.

A while after this came Miantenomie from block Island to Mantacut with a troop of men, Waiandance being not at home, and in Stead of receiuing presents w'ch they use to doe in thr progresse, he gaue them gifts, calling them brethren & frends, for So are we all Indeans as y' English are, and Say broth'r to one anothr', So mutt we be one as they are, othr'-wise we shall be all gone shortly, for you know our fathers had plentie of deare, & Skins, our plaines were full of dear as also our woods and of Tur-keies, and our Coues full of fishe and foule, but thes English hauing gotten our land, they with Sithes cut downe ye graff, and with axes fell the trees their Cowes & horfes eat ye graff, and th' hoggs spoyle our Clambanks, and we Shall all be starued: therfore it is best for you to doe as wee for wee are all the Sachems from Eaft to west both Moquakues & Mowhauks Joyning with vs, and we are all resolued to fall vpon them all at one apoynted day, and therfore I am cum to you priuately first becauf you can prfuade the Indeans and Sachem to w't you will & I will send ouer 50 Indeans to block Iland, and 30 to you from thence and take an 100 of Southampton Indeans with an 100 of yo' owne heere, and when you see the 3 fires ye will be made 40 dayes hence in a cleare night then do as wee: and ye next day fall on and kill men women & children, but no Cowes for they will ferue to eate till our dear be Increafed again: And our old men thought it was well So ye Sachem came home and had but little talke with them, yet he was tould thear had been a secret consultation between the old men and miantinomie; but they tould him nothing in 3 dayes, So he came ouer to me and aquainted me with the manner of ye Naraganfits being theare with his men and asked me what I thought of it, and I tould him ye Naraganfit Sachem was naught to talke with his men Secretly in his absence and I bid him goe home and tould him a way how [9] he might know all and then ye he shoule come and tell me, and So he did and found all out as is aboue written, and I Sent intelligence of it ouer to Mr Haynes and Mr Eaton, but becauf my boat was gone from home it was 15 dayes before they had any letter, and Miantenomie was gotten home before they had Newes of and ye ould men w they saw how I and ye Sachem had beguiled them and ye he was come ouer to me, they Sent secretely a Canoe ouer in a mooneshine night to Naraganfit to tell them al was discovered, So ye plot failed bleffed be God, & ye plotter next spring after did as ahab did at ramoth Gillead So he to Mohegin and there had his fall

Two years aft' this, Ninecrat sent ouer a Captain of his who acted in euery poyn as ye former, him ye Sachem tooke and bound and brought him to me and I wroat the Same to Gouernr Eaton & sent an Indean ye was my servant and had liued 4 years with me him with 9 more I Sent to carie him to New hauen and gaue them fooe for 10 dayes, but ye wind hindered them at Plum Iland, then they went to Shelt' Iland, where the old Sachem dwelt waiandances elder brth' and in ye night they let him goe, only my letter they sent to New hauen and thus thes 2 plots was discovered but now my frend and brth' is gone, who will now do the like

But if the p'missles be not sufficient to proue Waiandance a true frend to ye Englifh for sum may say he did all this out of malice to ye pequits and Naraganfits, Now I shal proue the like with respect to ye long Ilanders his own men for I being at Me-antacut it hapened y't for an old grudg of a pequit who was put to death at Southampton being known to be a murderer and for this his frends beare a spight against ye Englih So as it came to pas at y't day I was at Mantacut a good honest woman was killed by them at Southampton but it was not known then who did this Murder and ye broth'r of this Sachem was Shinacock Sachem could or would not find it out, at y't time Mr Gosmore & Mr Howell being Magistrates sent an Indean to fetch ye Sachem thither and it being in ye Night I was laid downe when he came, and being a great cry amongst them vpon which all the men gathered togeth'r and the storie being told, all of them said the Sachem Should not goe, for said they, they will eyth'r bind you or kill you and then vs both men women and Children, thersore let yo' broth'r find it out or let them kill you & vs we will liue and die togeth'r, so ther was a great silence for a while and then the Sachem said Now you haue all done I will heare w't my frend will say for knowes w't they will doe, So they wakend me as they thought, but I was not asleep, and told me the storie but I made strang of ye Matter and said if ye Magistrats haue sent for you why do you not goe, They will bind me or kill me Saith hee, I think So said I if you haue kild the woman, or known of it and did not reueale it but you weare heare and did it not, but was any of yo' Mantauket Indeans there to day, they all answered not a man thes 2 dayes for we haue Inquired

concerning yt alredie, then said I did none of you euer here any Indean say he would kill English no said they all then I said I shall not goe home till tomooro though I thought to haue been gone so soone as ye Moone was vp, but I will stay heare till you all know it is well with yo Sachem, if they bind him then bind you me, if they kill him kill me, but this you must find out him yt did the murder and all yt know of it them they will haue and no more [10] Then they with a great cry thanked me, and I wrot a smaal noate with the Sachem that they should not stay him long in th' houses but let him eat & drinke and be gone for he had his way before him, So they did and yt Night he found out 4 yt weare consent's to it & knew of it and brought them to them at Southampton & they weare all hanged at harford wheof one of thes was a great Man amongst them comonly cald ye blew Sachem A further Instance of his faithfullnes is this about ye pequit war time one William Hamman of ye Bay killed by a giant like Indean toward the duch I herd of it and told Waiandance yt he must kill him or bring him to me, but he said it was not his brothers mind and he is ye great Sachem of all long Iland, likewise ye Indean is a mightie gret man and no man durft meddle with him and hath many friends, So this rested vntil he had killed anothers, one Thomas ffarrington, after this ye old Sachem died and I spake to this Sachem again about it and he answered he is so cuning yt when he hears yt I come yt way a hunting yt his frends tell him and then he is gone but I will goe at Sum time when nobodie knowes of it and then I will kill him and So he did, and this was ye laft act which he did for vs, for in ye time of a great Mortallitie among them he died, but it was by poyfon also 2 thirds of ye In- deans vpon long Iland died, els ye Naragansfits had not made such hauoke here as they haue and might not help them

And this I haue written chiefly for our own good, yt we might considr w' danger we are all in, and also to declare to the Cuntrie yt we had found an an heathen yea an Indean in this respect to parallel the Jewiwh Mordacay but now I am at a ftand, for all we English would be thought and called chriiftians, yet though I haue feene this before ipoken hauing been thers 24 years in ye mouth of ye promisses yet I know not wheare to find or whose name to Infert to parallell Ahasuerous liing on his bed and could not sleep and called for the cronacles to be read, and when he heard Mordacaie named saie w' hath been done for him, but who will say as he saie or doe anfwerable to w' he did, but our New England 12 penne chronacle is stuffed with a catalogue of ye names of Some as if they had deferued Imortall fame but the right New England Millitarie worthies are left out for want of roome as Maior Mason Captain vndrill lieftennant Sielley &c who vnder-tooke the desparate way and defigne to Millick fort and kild 300 burnt the fort and tooke many prifon-ers, though they are not once named but honnests Abraham thought it no shame to name the confederates ye helped him to warre when he redeemed his broth' lot, but vncas of Miñlik and Waiandance at ye great Swamp, and euer since ye trustie frend is forgotten and for our sakes persecuted to this day with fire and sword & Ahasuerous of New England is still asleep, and if there be any like to Ahasuerous let him remember what glorie to God and honnor to our natio hath followed th' wisdome and vallor, awake, awake Ahasuerous if there be any of thy seed or spirit here and let not haman destroy vs as he hath done our mordecay

[11] And although there hath been much bloud Shed here in thes parts among vs, God and we know it came not by vs, but if all must drinke of this cup that is threatened then shortly the king of theshack shall drink last and tremble and fall when our paine will be pait, / Oh ye I weare in ye Cuntryes againe, that in their but 12 years truce repaired Citties and townes, made strong forts and prepared all things needfull against a time of warre, like Sollomon, I thinke the Soyle hath almoft infected me but what they or our enemies will doe hereafter I know not I hope I shal not liue So long to here or fe it for I am old & out of date els I might be in feare to fee and heare ye I thinke ere long will come vpon vs / [12] Thus for our tragicall storie Now to the commadie, When we weare all at Supper in the great haule they the pequits gaue vs a larum to draw vs out 3 times before wee could finishe our shorth supper, for we had but little to eate, but you know y't I would not goe out the reasons you know. 2ndly you, Robert Chapman, you know, y't w you and John Bagley weare beating famp at ye garden pales, the fentenells called you to run in for theare was a number of pequits creeping to you to catch you I hearing it went vp to ye redout and put two crosf bar sht into the 2 guns y't lay aboue and leueld them at ye trees in ye middle of ye limbs and boughes and gaue order to John ffriend and his man to stand with handspickes to turn them this or y't way, as they should heare the Indeans shout, for they should know my shout from theirs for it shoulde be verie short, then I cal'd 6 men and the doggs and went out runing to ye place, and keeping all abreit in fight, close togeth'r, and when I saw my time I said stand, and called all to mee faying looke on me and when I hould vp my hand then shout as loud as you can, and when I hould downe my hand then leaue and so they did, then the Indeans began a long Shout, & then went off y'e 2 great guns and toare the limbs of ye trees about th'ears so y't diuers of them weare hurt as may yet appeare, for you tould me when I was vp at harford this present yeare 60 in ye moneth of Septemb' ye theare is one of them lieth aboue Harford ye is faine to creepe on all fower, & we shouted once or twice more but they would not answer vs again, so we returned home laughing, an oth' prittie pranke we had, with 3 great doares of 10 foot long & 4 foot broad, being boared full of hoales, and driuen full of long nailes as sharp as all blades Sharpned by thomas hurlbut thes we placed in Certain places, wheare they should come, fearing leaft they should come in ye Night and fire our redout or batterie and all ye place, for wee had seen their footing, wheare they had been in ye night when they shot at our sentenells but could not hit the for ye boards & in a dry time and a darke night they came as they did before, and found the way a little too sharp for them, and as they skipt from one they trod vpon anoth' and left the Nailes and doores died with th' bloud which you know we saw ye Next Morning laughing at it: & this I write ye young men may learn if they should meet with such tryals as we mett with theare and haue not opportunitie to cut off th' enemies, yet they may with such pritty pranks preferrue themselfes from dang', for pollicie is Needfull in warres as well as strength.
