Two Poems by Don Welch. Drawings by Mark Sanders.

The Hawk

Somewhere years from now
I hope I'm saying this to my sons. Why the hawk had hit the trap I couldn't guess.
In the face of it
It was pointless.

But it had hit the trigger
dead center with both feet,
for a moment lifting
that fatal weight
before the blind torque
of the trap had sprung.

After that its wings had clawed
at the sand for hours,
its cries had gradually sunk back into its throat, although its beak, thrust defiantly at the stream, held on to its animal yellow.

Then it had pulled everything in,
for a moment the hawk
and only the hawk's turn.
In that blind and beautiful light,
trying to hold on,
as the trap held on,
to what it was.
Baltimore Oriole

This morning the oriole is a good carpenter, working itself for the sake of its nest.

Hounding the right bits of grass, it has turned flight into a muscular blossoming.

The air is something it keeps slipping into; it is what it beats into breath with its life.

Tonight the sky will be hung with migrational stars; it will be the dark hunting ground of owls, the briefer tomb of anything sleeping.

But tomorrow the oriole will be at its work again, and it will be singing.
