JULY 30–AUGUST 5

Organization and Personal Development for Educators (NTL Institute) Bethel, ME

This program will provide skill and knowledge in organization, group and personal dynamics for persons who are in administrative roles in higher education. Such roles include deans, chairpersons, directors of faculty and staff development, etc. Participants will gain an understanding of why organizations, groups and individuals behave as they do and how one can intervene to increase effectiveness and satisfaction. A major focus will be on exploring ways of integrating the personal needs of participants with the demands of their organizations. Interpersonal and leadership styles will be examined. Participants will learn about change strategies and will apply the concepts to their own institutions. The workshop will combine presentation of theory with small group discussions, exercises, role playing, case histories and the use of diagnostic instruments. It will be of particular interest to persons who are involved with faculty or staff development programs.
