INTRODUCTION

This bibliography of anthropological serials in the University of Nebraska Libraries has been undertaken primarily for two reasons. The first follows from the incredibly diverse nature of the discipline itself, for the study of man and his origins has given rise to various methods of inquiry and interdisciplinary overlays. As Sol Tax has pointed out, the study of man appears to have no natural boundaries. It comes as little surprise, therefore, that the bibliography representing the published record of such a varied field of study should itself be extremely diffuse. Add to this natural diffusion the characteristic pattern of dispersed library holdings throughout various branch locations and in several stack areas within the main library, and the situation becomes all the more confusing. This bibliography represents an attempt to bring together a single listing of all serial titles within the UNL collections pertaining to one or another of the sub-fields of anthropology, with locational and holdings information for each title. It is hoped that the product of this undertaking will bring some semblance of order out of diversity and will serve to enhance access to the collections.

The second reason for undertaking the project pertains to the relative strength of retrospective holdings within the UNL libraries. Admittedly, the budget cuts of recent years have precluded any possibility of maintaining the collection at an adequate level. Nevertheless, the UNL collections reflect some thorough and systematic bibliographic spadework in years gone by, particularly for North American archaeology and ethnology. This bibliography will hopefully bring this fact more fully to light. Due to various problems of providing adequate access to library collections in the past, it is doubtful whether these rather extensive holdings are being utilized to a very full extent. The prospect of unearthing a "good", if not "excellent" collection, plus the hope that access to the materials might be enhanced, would each be adequate justification for undertaking this bibliographic project.

Inclusion Criteria

For the sake of enhancing the utility of this bibliography, it is as important to know what it does not include as it is to understand its scope of inclusion. One such limitation is obviously the date of currency. It is only current as of June, 1978: any new periodicals or retrospective irregular serials added to the collections since that date are not included. One such example that has already come to the compiler's attention is ARCHAEOLOGY OF EASTERN NORTH AMERICA (LOVE E77.8 A7) which, although acquired by the Library before the deadline, did not have entries filed in the public catalog in sufficient time for inclusion in the list. It is also possible, although less likely, that occasional retrospective volumes or numbers of an irregular serial will be added as available and as limited funds permit. Any such acquisitions would of course render the holdings statement for the appropriate title incomplete. Anyone requiring current information for any such title should check the public catalog and, as of early 1979, the Library Information Retrieval System computer terminal. Such items will also be included in the bi-monthly current acquisitions list, two copies of which are sent to the department upon compilation of each new issue.

Another rather arbitrary decision bearing upon the scope of the bibliography follows from the manner in which a given item has been cataloged in the UNL libraries. If the title has been set up as a serial, with an open entry and all numbers or volumes of the title assigned the same classification number, the title is included in this listing, however incomplete our holdings may be. Conversely, if the individual items in a monographic series or serial are cataloged as separates, with only added entries filed under the series or serial title for each item owned by UNL, the title is not included in this list. Therefore, CAMBRIDGE STUDIES IN SOCIAL ANTHROPOLOGY is not included because each number within the series owned by University of Nebraska libraries is separately classed with added entries for the series. Likewise, the YALE UNIVERSITY PUBLICATIONS IN ANTHROPOLOGY are not included, whereas the much less frequently published YALE ANTHROPOLOGICAL STUDIES is listed. Each item in the two former series is entered under its distinctive author and title and is separately classed, so that they are dispersed in the stacks as appropriate for the subject of each. The latter title, however, has its main entry under that title; all four volumes have the same call number and therefore will be found together on the shelf. The rationale for this admittedly arbitrary distinction is that serials or monographic series for which individual items are classed separately will be more readily accessible in the card catalog. Items classed and cataloged as a serial may indeed have only the single entry for all the times of that title in our collection, and may therefore be much less accessible. The bibliography is, after all, intended as a guide to this particular library's collections.
Apart from the above restrictions, the primary tool for identifying relevant serial titles was the extensive Serial Publications in Anthropology. This list of approximately 2,400 serial titles was compiled from the holdings of nine research and university libraries in the Chicago area. The inclusion policy that was adopted in compiling the parent listing, and hence for the work in hand, can be regarded either as "thorough" or "permissive", depending on the point of view with which one approaches anthropological bibliography in general. Overall, UNL has good coverage for English language titles included in the parent list, but only sporadic coverage of non-English publications. As a supplement to the titles identified by the above bibliography, the UNL shelf catalog was searched in the various relevant classification categories. This procedure yielded a significant number of titles not included in the title cited above.

As a final note on the scope of coverage, the user must check the public catalog whenever in doubt as to the inclusion of a given title in the UNL collections. For the various reasons explained above, the exclusion of a given title from the list should not lead the user automatically to the conclusion that the item sought is not available in the UNL library collections.

Hints to the User

Each complete entry includes the following information: locational designator and call number, title, place of publication, holdings information, frequency of publication, current status of publication if known, and, wherever pertinent, a cross-listing of superseded or subsequent titles. These items of description are exemplified by the following entry:

LOVE JOURNAL OF NEAR EASTERN STUDIES. (University of Chicago, Illinois). v. 1, 1942 to date. Msg. v. 2 no. 1. q.

Supersedes: American Journal of Semitic Languages and Literatures.

The locational indicator is given at the top of the call number, even if this information is not available in the public catalog entry for the title. This should be a considerable aid in enhancing access to those items available at a branch library or at more than one location. When a second location has all or part of the holdings for the same serial title, that location is listed below the call number. The user should take note of the fact, however, that the holdings information provided for a title available at more than one location pertains only to the primary location. In many instances the secondary location will have less extensive holdings for the title than the first. An up-to-date locations list is available at the handout rack near the Information Desk in the link area of Love Library.

The title of each entry is typed in all capitals to set it off from the other elements of description in the entry. The user should be alerted to the fact that cross references from one form of the title to another have been used only sparingly as a means of limiting the length, and hence the cost of the final product. A few titles have been entered twice, such as MEMOIRS OF THE MUSEUM OF ANTHROPOLOGY, UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN, and MICHIGAN, UNIVERSITY. MUSEUM OF ANTHROPOLOGY. MEMOIRS for the same title. The user may find it necessary to add additional cross references to insure greater ease of use. Adequate space is provided between entries and in the right-hand margins for this purpose.

The place of publication, if known, is given in parentheses after the title. This is followed by the holdings information. Although care has been taken to ascertain that this information is correct, it is this portion of the entry that is most likely to contain errors. The information given in the holdings statement is both more specific and more complete than that provided by the public catalog entry. A typical periodical entry such as ABSTRACTS IN ANTHROPOLOGY can be taken to exemplify the point. Whereas the public catalog merely gives the commencing volume and date of publication, the entry on p. 3 of this bibliography clearly indicates that our holdings for the title only include v. 4 to the present (i.e., the most recently published volume). This information could become out of date if the missing volumes are purchased, but the lack of funds will probably render that possibility unlikely for all but the most important titles.

Any volumes or numbers of those once received that were known to be missing at the time of compiling this bibliography are also indicated. Furthermore, those titles for which a microform copy is available will have the volume holdings, accession number, and location of the microform edition given in a separate note. The patron should be alerted to the fact that the most recently published issues of a journal on microfilm are not typically available as soon as the corresponding issues of the paper edition. All issues of a given volume are usually filmed only after the entire volume has been published.

Various abbreviations are used to indicate the frequency of publication. These are as follows:
Proposed Changes

The usability of this bibliography as a finding aid may decrease somewhat over the years as certain changes in the UNL library system are initiated. Undoubtedly the greatest change in the offing is the Library Information Retrieval System (LIRS) that will be implemented early in 1979. This system will provide on-line access to information concerning the check-out status and availability of library materials. For monographs, present plans are for all publications issued since 1975 to be entered into the data base. For active periodicals and irregular serials, records are already being converted into machine-readable form for entry into the data base. It is unlikely, however, that this project will be completed in less than three or four years. Therefore, the work in hand will fill a particularly urgent need in the interim period. Eventually, it will be possible to acquire updated information for the entries in this list by calling up the entry on one of the LIRS computer terminals.

Another change is planned over the next few years for the microform edition of serials. These will be classified so that each microform title will have the same call number as the paper edition of the same title. As of that time, the accession number given for each microform title in this list will be out of date; the patron will then need to check the call number given for the paper edition of the title sought in order to gain access to the microform edition.

Finally, the patron should be alerted to the fact that active serial titles are gradually being reclassified from Dewey Decimal to the Library of Congress classification system. Therefore if the old Dewey Decimal number does not lead one to the right stack locations for the item sought, one should check the public catalog or the LIRS terminal (as of early 1979) to determine the new call number and location.
The compiler of this bibliography requests that the user bring any suggestions or corrections to his attention.
