Message from the President

Terrell P. Salmon, President

As we wind up 1990, it seems like it has been a whirlwind year. NADCA has gone through significant changes, especially with regard to The Probe. The new format is taking shape and the editors are learning why Bill Fitzwater was anxious to find a replacement. A successful newsletter addresses your interests and desires. To do this we need your input and feedback. Active participation by each NADCA member will make The Probe the premier newsletter in the world related to animal damage control.

Despite recent changes in The Probe, officers, and Regional Directors, the goals and objectives of NADCA remain unchanged. They are to:

- Promote wildlife damage management as an integral part of resource management.
- Promote public understanding and awareness of the need for biologically sound and effective wildlife damage control programs.
- Promote professionalism and communication within the field of wildlife damage control.
- Support wildlife damage control research efforts and assist in disseminating results of such efforts.
- Assist members and the public in solving specific wildlife damage problems by referral to the appropriate sources of information and expertise.

It's our Association. It is and will be what we make it. Thank you for your interests in the Association and the profession. They are both great.

NADCA Membership Meeting In Lincoln

The National Animal Damage Control Association will hold a membership meeting during the 10th Great Plains Wildlife Damage Control Workshop in Lincoln, Nebraska, April 15-18, 1991. Watch future issues of The Probe for more details.

INSIDE:

1990 NADCA MEMBERSHIP DIRECTORY

Many memberships will be expiring at the end of December. I have been very pleased with (and somewhat surprised at) the number of you that have renewed without any reminder at all. Anyway, here is that reminder for most of us that need it—check your membership expiration date on the mailing label to see if your time has arrived. Everyone should use the application form with this issue.

Wes Jones, Treasurer
