THE GAL IN THE GLASS

When you get what you want in your struggle for gain,
And the World makes you Queen for a day
Just go to the mirror and look at yourself,
And see what that gal has to say.

It isn't your father or mother or boss
Who judgment upon you must pass;
The one whose verdict counts most in your life
Is the one staring back in the glass.

She's the one you must satisfy beyond all the rest,
For she's with you right up to the end—
And you have passed your most difficult test
If the gal in the glass is your friend.

You may be one who got a good break
Or impressed some wonderful guy;
But the gal in the glass says you're only a fake;
If you can't look her straight in the eye.

You may fool the whole world down the pathway of years—
And get pats on the back as you pass;
But your final reward will be heartaches and tears,
If you cheated the gal in the glass.

Greetings, Fellow UNOPA Members:

Another busy year at the University is underway. Are you starting out with enthusiasm, prepared for the challenges which lie ahead? What better way is there to meet new and old friends and to develop professionally than by joining UNOPA!

Your UNOPA board has planned a program for the year which we hope will be stimulating and inspiring. As many of you requested, we will visit the new music and dental buildings and, we hope, embark on a bus tour next spring to ??

We welcome your suggestions. We need your active participation and hope you will encourage your co-workers and friends to join our growing organization. By working together, we can make this another memorable year for UNOPA.

September 20th is the date of our first meeting, and from what we hear, we have a treat in store for us - a report by Ron Hull on his recent trip to Vietnam. He recently returned from Vietnam where he was Programming Production Advisor to the South Vietnam T-V Project, and is now Assistant to the Director of Nebraska’s NE T network. The meeting will be held at Nebraska Union on City Campus at noon. The committee in charge is Ida Gilbert, chairman and Irene Bettenhausen.

IN RETROSPECT

Mrs. Norbert T. Tiemann, wife of the Governor of Nebraska, greeted 150 University Personnel women at a tea at the Governor's Mansion, June 3rd. She was assisted in the receiving line by Jan Wacker, retiring president and Doris Lesoing, president-elect of UNOPA.

Special guests were members of the office personnel at the University of Nebraska Medical College in Omaha. Marjorie Adey, president of the Omaha group, poured. Also presiding at the tea table were Ruth Rosenberg and Luree Parpart.

A bouquet of red roses centered the table. Petit fours and mints carried the red and white color scheme of the decorations.

The sunny afternoon afforded additional pleasure as guests strolled through the rose garden and toured the mansion.

Sally Osborn was general chairman for the tea. Members of her committee were Ruth Enlow, Norma Wagner and Clarice Dick.

Mrs. Luella Diekhoff of UNOPA, along with Mrs. Vera Moorhead of the Hastings Public Schools and Mrs. Pauline Anderson, Concordia College, Seward, who are on the Committee of Elections of the Nebraska Educational Secretaries Association, met in York, Nebraska Thursday evening, August 10. The committee selected a slate of officers to be presented to the State Association members at their Fall Conference in Beatrice, Thursday, October 26.

All UNOPA members are invited to join the State Association, to enjoy the friendliness and to share in the activities of office personnel from the educational institutions all over the state, and also to receive five or six issues of the state magazine which contains all sorts of "goodies". It will help you to keep in the "know" professionally. Membership fee is $3 which may be mailed to Mrs. Margaret Myers, Lincoln Public Schools, 800 South 24th Street, Lincoln, Nebraska 68510.

A LITTLE BIRD TOLD US THAT -

Rose Frolik was Secretary of the Day with all the "trimmings" July 24th. She also attended the Convention of the National Educational Secretaries Association about which we hope to hear more later.

Ruth Rosenberg really "splurged" on her vacation with a trip to Hawaii, no less!

Eleanor Timken was "wined and dined and treated just plain wonderfully" in San Francisco and Ruth Hutchins "squandered" her time at Las Vegas, the Utah Parks and the Grand Conyen in Colorado. Would you believe that Ruth is the mother of TWINS (not recently, however!)?

Emma Vosika, who was to have been UNOPA treasurer this year, has taken off to the cool climes of Colorado and has been replaced by Irma Lingren. The question now is: who takes Irma's place?

The "I" in Fashion

Fashions come and go with such jet speed these days that even if our budgets can keep up with them often our judgment can't.

Hemlines are up, hemlines are down! Waistlines are in, waistlines are out! Shoes are pointy, shoes are square! It's long hair, it's short hair! No-color lips, yes-color lips! What's a woman to do?

Well, for one thing, don't let that fashion magazine rule you.

Face yourself frankly in the mirror. Add up your good points (there are always more than you think) and try to dress in a way that will make the most of those feature attractions. That's what the world's best-dressed women do. They hold that title NOT because they wear the NEWEST thing, but because they wear it on their very own terms.

You don't have to be a fashion expert to tell which new looks are for you and which are "again". Just ask yourself the right questions before you go in for the latest rage. Let's take hemlines, for example. How short should your skirts be? Ask yourself -- How old am I? How good are my legs? How tall am I? Shop with yourself in mind, not that magazine mannequin. Be guided by the fashion magazines, not bullied by them. Remember that what might be a "must" for one woman can be a "don't" for another.

REFLECTIONS

We asked Luella Diekhoff to share with us some of her impressions of the BIG CITY while attending the National Convention of Business and Professional Women. Here it is:

"We saw New York at 6:30 in the morning in our search for a place that served early breakfasts. This is the time when New Yorkers walked their dogs--alley dogs, French poodles, dobermans,--whatever you have, you walk. The streets are quiet and empty and cool. The garbage cans are now empty and the debris on the streets has been cleaned up. The little grocery stores are open--not for business but for letting in the cool morning air.

We saw New York at midnight from the RCA Building tower--the great white ways criss-crossing the patches of darkness, the white outline of Central Park, the banks of the East River, the jillions of lighted windows in the office and hotel buildings, the crazy multi-colored neon signs blinking endlessly; and from the hot pavement--clutching our purses, fearful of pickpockets, mingling with the theater-goers after the Broadway shows were over and being jostled by the "night" people heading toward discotheques or night clubs. We hurried past darkened Go-Go Clubs where drums beat out complicated rhythms and furtively caught reflections of writhing Go-Go girls on table tops. We peered into the faces of those around us trying to distinguish the natives from the tourists. We sniffed tantalizing food odors wafted out from the alley canyons.

We saw New York's greatest in personalities at high noon--or thereabouts. It was just before lunch when Governor Nelson Rockefeller crossed the platform with outstretched arms to greet Sally Cunningham, President of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women, A University of Nebraska Law School graduate from McCook, Nebraska. Governor Rockefeller was handsome, well groomed, poised, charming. He smiled, shook hands with all who extended theirs, waved to acknowledge the applause and gave a delightful welcome, after which he waited in the corridor for an informal question-and-answer period which was also televised.

The Mayor of New York City, John Lindsey, was scheduled to appear right after lunch. He arrived at 4:30 p.m. disheveled, wrinkled, mussed, tired, grim, and abrupt. He had been up most of the night and all day touring the riot areas in Newark. He smiled but it was forced, he shook very few of the outstretched hands, he accepted small courtesies with no acknowledgment. He was gracious in his greeting but left immediately after he finished. Here was a man with a job to do and he was physically, personally, in the midst of doing it. Worried and weary--yet he interrupted his work to greet 5,000 business and professional women from all 50 of these United States.

I wondered then and I wonder now whether he kept this commitment because he respected the potential influence of women or because he is a man who keeps the commitments he makes."

And this little joke, told by the President of the Alaska BPWC to Luella, is too cute to keep: "Two French poodles were out for a stroll in Central Park where they met Just Plain Dog. One French poodle put her nose up in the air and said, "My name is Mimi, spelled M-i-m-i." The second French poodle put her nose up in the air and said, "My name is Fifi, spelled F-i-f-i."

Just Plain Dog, not to be outdone by these pedigreed snobs, put his nose in the air and said, "My name is Fido, spelled P-h-y-d-e-s.u-x."

Thank you, Luella.
