

2011

About the Authors

Follow this and additional works at: <http://digitalcommons.unl.edu/nhcjournal>

"About the Authors" (2011). Journal of the National Collegiate Honors Council --Online Archive. 294.
<http://digitalcommons.unl.edu/nhcjournal/294>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the National Collegiate Honors Council at DigitalCommons@University of Nebraska - Lincoln. It has been accepted for inclusion in Journal of the National Collegiate Honors Council --Online Archive by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@University of Nebraska - Lincoln.

About the Authors

Bernice Braid is Director Emeritus of the University Honors Program, Long Island University Brooklyn. As a past president of NCHC, she has worked with the Honors Semesters Committee since the first national Honors Semester. She invented City As Text™ to serve as an integrative seminar in experiential programs and now directs the LIU Brooklyn Core Seminar.

Morgan Brockington is a third-year anthropology and premed student at the University of Maine. She plans to continue on to medical school in order to pursue an MD/MPH focusing on global health. She hopes to specialize in emergency medicine and eventually work with the World Health Organization.

Scott Carnicom is Associate Dean of the Honors College and Associate Professor of Psychology at Middle Tennessee State University. During the 2011–2012 academic year, he is serving off-campus as a Fellow of the American Council on Education. He is a member of the NCHC Publications Board and the editorial board for Honors in Practice.

Ray J. Davis is former Interim Director of the North Carolina A & T State University Honors Program. He currently teaches in the School of Technology at NCA&T, where he previously served as Associate Dean. In addition to being a member of the NCHC Assessment and Evaluation Committee, he is President-Elect of the National Association of African American Honors Programs (NAAHP).

Janaan Decker is Student Services Coordinator for the Frederik Meijer Honors College at Grand Valley State University. She received her M. Ed. in 2008 from GVSU. She develops co-curricular and service-learning programs, and she collaborates with the Honors Living Center director to create programs that bridge academic and student affairs.

Neil H. Donahue is Associate Dean of the Hofstra University Honors College and Professor of German and Comparative Literature. He is also Undergraduate Research Coordinator and Inter/National Fellowships Adviser. He has directed a Hofstra program in Munich and oversees honors credit for study abroad for Hofstra's honors college students.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Marsha Driscoll is Director of the Honors Program at Bemidji State University. She is a co-author of Charles Darwin, the Copley Medal, and the Rise of Naturalism, 1862–1864. She holds a PhD in psychology and an MA in Anglo-American social and intellectual history.

Annie Hakim is an honors student at Grand Valley State University. She majors in international relations and graduates April 2011. She was Director of the GVSU/Ghana Clean Water Initiative in 2009–2010. In addition, she is a Teach for America Corps member.

Carolyn Haynes is Professor of English at Miami University (Ohio) and has directed the honors program since 2002. A member of the NCHC Publications Board, she teaches interdisciplinary and writing-oriented courses. She received her PhD from University of California, San Diego, in 1993 in comparative literature. She is author and editor of Innovations in Interdisciplinary Teaching (2002) and has published articles on student learning, pedagogy, and curricular issues.

Leena Karsan is Living Center Director for Niemeyer Honors & Calder Arts at Grand Valley State University, a position she has held since June 2009. She received her BS from Eastern Michigan University and her master's degree in higher education student affairs administration at the University of South Carolina.

Kristen Kuhns is studying for her master's degree in anthropology at Georgia State University, focusing on ecological models of human health and disease and the application of such models in public health policy. She earned her BA in anthropology and premedical studies from the University of Maine.

Melissa Ladenheim holds a PhD in folklore from Memorial University of Newfoundland and has taught in the University of Maine Honors College since 2005. She has also taught in Memorial's folklore program and lectured at the Universitetet i Bergen in Norway. Currently, she is researching the history of Jews in Old Town, Maine.

Molly MacLagan graduated from Kent State University in May of 2010 with a Bachelor of Arts in theatre studies with honors distinction. Her honors thesis, Early English Drama: A Practical Guide, received a Portz Award in 2010. She is currently working as the Literary Management and Dramaturgy Intern at Pittsburgh's City Theatre, will play Iago in Othello at Throughline Theatre in the summer of 2011, and will begin work on her MA in theatre arts at the University of Pittsburgh in fall 2011.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Soncerey L. Montgomery is Assistant Professor of Speech and Interim Director of the Winston-Salem State University Honors Program. She is a member of the NCHC Diversity Committee and the NAAHP Conference Planning Committee. She oversees the Spanish Language Immersion Program (SLIP) in Mexico.

Rosalie C. Otero is Director of the Honors Program at The University of New Mexico. During her tenure as director since 1992, she has initiated and encouraged over nine different faculty-led international programs, some of which have been repeated several times. If she had the resources, international study would be a requirement of the honors program. Otero is a former president of NCHC and member of several NCHC committees. Her latest publication is the second edition of Assessment & Evaluation: A Practical Handbook available on the NCHC website.

Gladys Palma de Schrynemakers, Associate Provost of Long Island University Brooklyn, teaches social sciences in the LIU University Honors Program. She has taught Core Seminar, The Idea of the Human, since its inception and has made presentations on her design for field explorations in which students experience and integrate literary work in a social context. She has published frequently on the theory and practice of constructing knowledge.

Christopher A. Snyder is Professor of European History and Director of the Marymount University Honors Program in Arlington, Virginia. He received his PhD in medieval history from Emory University and is the author of eight books, including The Britons (Blackwell, 2003) and The World of King Arthur (Thames & Hudson, 2000).

Uchenna P. Vasser is Associate Professor of Spanish at Winston-Salem State University. Her research has focused on Latin American literature and a comparative study of Afro-Hispanic and West African writers. She is also Academic Advisor and Resident Instructor for the Spanish Language Immersion Program (SLIP) in Mexico.