The Margaret Sanger Papers Project announces its ninth year of summer internships. Since 1995, graduate and undergraduate students from universities in the U.S. and Europe have worked with the editorial staff on our microfilm, book and electronic publications and received broad experience in historical research and editing. We seek applicants to fill a limited number of positions in the Summer of 2003 and hope that you will announce this opportunity to your students and colleagues.

The Margaret Sanger Papers is a documentary editing project, located in the History Department at New York University, which has published a 101-reel microfilm edition of the papers of America's most noted birth control reformer, and is in the process of publishing a four-volume book edition and an electronic edition of speeches and articles. The first volume of the Project's book edition, The Selected Papers of Margaret Sanger, Volume I: The Woman Rebel, 1900–1928 was published recently by the University of Illinois Press.

Interns can select from work on the Project's book edition (Volume II: The Politics of Planned Parenthood, 1928–1939) or its electronic edition of Sanger's speeches and articles. Student applying for the internships should be familiar with IBM-based computers, have good research skills and some background in U.S. history, women's history or women's studies.

Application information can be located at the Project's website, or by contacting Cathy Moran Hajo (see below). The deadline for applications for Summer 2003 is March 1.
