Change was in the air at the 2010 National Agri-Marketing Association (NAMA) Annual Conference held April 20-23 in Kansas City, Missouri. Students and professionals alike were given the opportunity to rub shoulders with, and hear nationally known speakers engaging audiences on topics such as the new rules of marketing and publication relations, measuring the effectiveness of social media and strategy, and brand communication.

The NAMA Annual Conference provides an excellent opportunity for NAMA student members to interact with business, marketing and advertising professionals from across the United States. Events at the professional trade show which operates during the conference gives students a chance to meet professionals from many of the companies who hire our graduates, and NAMA sponsors a luncheon for students and professionals.

The National Agri-Marketing Association is comprised of over 25 chapters in six regions nationwide, and has more than 3,500 professional and student members. Both professional and student awards are a highlight of the conference. This year, Stephanie Liska, CEO of Beck Ag, Inc. and a member of the Nebraska Midlands NAMA (professional) Chapter was named 2010 NAMA Marketer of the Year. Fifteen student scholarship awards are made at the conference, with two of them this year going to Nebraska students. Karoline Kastanek, a senior from Wilber, NE, and Kristin Witte, a freshman from Scribner, NE each received an Agri-Business Educational Foundation (ABEF) scholarship.

Much of the focus for the student chapters is the marketing plan and outstanding chapter competitions. It is a culmination of hours of involvement in chapter activities, and development and presentation of a marketing plan. Last year's marketing team made it to the final round of the Student NAMA Team Marketing competition for the first time in Nebraska NAMA history, marketing a nutritional snack for children. On the heels of that success, the Nebraska team took on the challenge of marketing a value-added food product. It marketed "Agave Essential," a nutrition/energy bar made with agave nectar, a low-glycemic sweetener. The product, pitched as "simple energy," was marketed to active professionals for whom good health is a priority.

The marketing plan competition at national level requires that teams submit a written plan over a month prior to competition. Six flights of five to six teams compete in the first round, with two teams from each flight moving to semi-finals. Nebraska's team was the sixth team in the one flight of six to present, and the team gave an excellent presentation. However, the flight was a very competitive one — the only flight from which two finalist teams came forward. The two teams who moved on from the flight were New Mexico State and Cal Polytechnic State (Cal Poly), placing first and fifth respectively in finals competition.

This was a learning year for Nebraska. All but two members of the 2008-2009 team graduated, and several students on this year's team were freshmen or sophomores. The opportunity to attend national conference gave them a great chance to see the end result of their efforts in NAMA. Members of the Nebraska team who traveled to Kansas City and presented were Kris Bargen (Superior), Craig Davidson (Lamar), Dylan Knuth (Oxford), Megan Lubke (Osmond), Melissa Matulka (Thedford), Michelle Prothman (Albion), Laura Witte (Scribner), Kristin Witte (Scribner), Karoline Kastanek (Wilber) and Bryce Vaughn (Alliance)

(Alliance). For under-graduate students who choose to get involved, NAMA presents amazing opportunities. Through networking with professionals in NAMA, students can
