Galusha, Wusk receive Universitywide kudos

Leann Galusha and Carol Wusk received the University Kudos Award at the Jan. 19 meeting of the NU Regents.

Galusha is assistant to the chair of the Department of Chemistry. She acts as the liaison between the chair's office and the department, as well as between the department and the university community.

"The department and university are fortunate to have many hard-working and dedicated employees. Something that sets Leann apart is her determination to make the department and university a friendlier and more inclusive environment for faculty, coworkers and students," said Galusha's nominator. "She is able to stay upbeat and unruffled even during tense situations, and has developed a real ability for defusing frustrated individuals, allowing the person to sense that someone really cares while getting them to discuss their problem in a manner that will begin the process of finding a solution."

Wusk

Wusk is secretary specialist in the College of Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources Dean's Office. She serves as assistant to the dean and the associate dean of Academic Affairs.

"Carol has excellent people skills. She enjoys people and has a very sincere interest in each," said Wusk's nominator. "Carol easily develops a rapport with students, colleagues, faculty, administrators, parents and alumni, and moves effortlessly among them and communicates well with all. Her outgoing personality is an essential trait of CASNR's friendly reputation."
