AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION Teaching and Leadership Options

The Agriculture Education Program at the University of Nebraska–Lincoln provides students with a broad education in agriculture as well as training in leadership, presentation strategies, and interpersonal communication. The Teaching Option prepares and certifies students to teach agricultural topics to youth and adults in a variety of settings, most commonly in secondary and post secondary education. The Leadership Option prepares students to lead in a variety of positions in the community, the agriculture industry, business, and in youth development. Courses integrate leadership theory with practice in the context of real-world situations.

Agricultural Leadership, Education and Communication (ALEC) faculty are not only experts in their field, they have been recognized by the University of Nebraska for their excellence in teaching. These are educators who desire to see students succeed. Their individualized advising provides a personal touch to the career preparation of students.
