

University of Nebraska - Lincoln

DigitalCommons@University of Nebraska - Lincoln

The George Eliot Review

English, Department of

2-23-1987

A Newly Purchased Letter

T. Clifford Allbutt

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.unl.edu/ger>

Part of the Comparative Literature Commons, Literature in English, British Isles Commons, and the Women's Studies Commons

Allbutt, T. Clifford, "A Newly Purchased Letter" (1987). The George Eliot Review. 62.
<https://digitalcommons.unl.edu/ger/62>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the English, Department of at DigitalCommons@University of Nebraska - Lincoln. It has been accepted for inclusion in The George Eliot Review by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@University of Nebraska - Lincoln.

A NEWLY PURCHASED LETTER

The following letter has recently been purchased by Nuneaton Museum and Art Gallery and its publication here (as far as we are aware, for the first time) is with the Curator's kind permission. Unfortunately, no year is shown with the date, neither is the correspondent addressed in any other way than by 'My dear Sir', so it has been impossible to discover to whom it was written. All one can say is that it was penned some time between 1890 (the date of publication of Oscar Browning's Life of George Eliot) and 1925 when Sir Thomas Clifford Allbutt, the writer of the letter, died - a very long span!

T. Clifford Allbutt (1836-1925) met George Eliot in 1868. In 1864 he had been appointed physician to the Leeds General Infirmary, and George Eliot and Lewes spent two days looking around the new hospital with him. He was the inventor of the clinical thermometer and was once thought to have been the original of Lydgate in Middlemarch, although much more successful than the hapless character in the novel.

23 Feb

St. Radegund's
Cambridge

My dear Sir,

I saw a good deal of George Eliot in the years to which you referred and she would pick up a good deal from me and others about young men in their early medical years. And Lewes being himself a physiologist and often associated with medical men would tell her much and say much before her. Among Lewes' and her friends were Lockhart Clarke, W.F. Parker, (of the "shoulder girdle") Gardiner (?) of your own town and many others. It was often laughingly said among us that I had sat for Lydgate but this was only banter. She constructed the character as great imaginations can, out of very limited data as Owen constructed the (see \emptyset) etc.

She told me in respect of the Rainbow scene in

S. Marner that she had never "assisted" at a public house gathering but constructed the scene from bits of observation and reports.

I have often talked these matters over with Mr. Oscar Browning and in his little life is contained all of value I had to add to Cross' big book. On the whole a good many scientific medical men were known to her and Lewes was often in and out of hospitals, (she went minutely over Leeds new hospital with me*) and talked pathology often.

I had been a Paris student 1860-61 and before I knew G. E. and I introduced Duchane of Boulogne to Lewes and others. Paris hospitals had not then begun their reforms. Lewes was present at more than one B. M. A. meeting.

I wish I could give you more facts of interest.

Believe me,
Yours truly, (signed) T. Clifford Allbutt

* The phrase in brackets was inserted between the lines of the letter, clearly as an afterthought.

∅ The word which has not been deciphered is:

Can any reader help?

