Friday, October 27, 1995

Sea Crest Resort & Conference Center, N. Falmouth, MA

As cries for accountability and renewed emphasis on undergraduate education sound across North America, academic administrators* find themselves thrust into leadership roles in the movement to enhance learning on their campuses. Now in its 20th year, the POD Network knows the importance of teamwork in achieving these goals, especially in these times of constrained budgets.

The POD Network invites academic leaders to join faculty/instructional development specialists (and others) in collaboration regarding important issues related to teaching and learning in higher education. A number of concurrent sessions will address these themes and issues on Friday, October 27, 1995. Joining us on Friday will be Stephen Brookfield, who will present an address entitled, "The Other Side of the Mirror: Understanding Faculty at Adult Learners." Stephen Brookfield will draw upon interviews with teachers which explore how teachers learn about teaching. He will outline the categories of learning in which faculty most frequently engage (i.e., practical, political, emotional, ontological, epistemological) and he will argue that faculty experiences as teachers are not much different from student's experiences as learners. These are the major themes of his forthcoming book, Becoming a Critically Reflective Teacher.

Several concurrent sessions will be of special interest to academic administrators: "The Development Process of Learning to Teach." "How Can Academic Administrators Help Make Teaching More Visible?" "Does Higher Education Need What Technology Can Deliver?" "Teaching Academies: A New Way to Foster Excellence." "Curriculum Development: A Missing Link."

As a special incentive, POD is inviting non-member academic administrators to attend one day of the annual conference (Friday, October 27, 1995) at the following special rates:

Registration (for Friday only) $ 50.00
Overnight accommodations (Th and/or Fri) $ 87.76 each night
Friday food (breakfast, lunch, dinner & breaks).. $ 42.00
