

University of Nebraska - Lincoln

DigitalCommons@University of Nebraska - Lincoln

Journal of the National Collegiate Honors
Council –Online Archive

National Collegiate Honors Council

2010

About the Authors

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.unl.edu/nhcjournal>

Part of the Higher Education Administration Commons

"About the Authors" (2010). Journal of the National Collegiate Honors Council –Online Archive. 276.
<https://digitalcommons.unl.edu/nhcjournal/276>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the National Collegiate Honors Council at DigitalCommons@University of Nebraska - Lincoln. It has been accepted for inclusion in Journal of the National Collegiate Honors Council –Online Archive by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@University of Nebraska - Lincoln.

About the Authors

Bradley Bates is Director of Intercollegiate Athletics at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, where he presides over a department that made back-to-back football bowl game appearances for the first time in nearly thirty years while capturing conference championships in women's cross-country, ice hockey, baseball, men's and women's basketball, volleyball, men's and women's swimming and diving, soccer, tennis, softball, and synchronized skating. He holds a doctorate in education from Vanderbilt University.

Gary Bell is Professor of History at Texas Tech University and is Founding, but soon to be departing, Dean of the University Honors College there. He has written and published fairly extensively in the reader-gripping and popular field of Early Modern English diplomatic history but strays periodically into writing on contemporary civilization.

Scott Carnicom is Associate Dean of the Honors College and Associate Professor of Psychology at Middle Tennessee State University. He earned his Ph.D. in biopsychology from Stony Brook University, where he examined operant response force mechanics in rats. A past president of the Tennessee Collegiate Honors Council, he currently serves as chair of the NCHC's Research Committee and is also a member of the editorial board of the journal Honors in Practice.

Larry Clark is Professor of Psychology and former Director of the Honors Program at Southeast Missouri State University. He has served on the NCHC Executive Committee and as president of the GPHC. He helped to initiate the Teaching and Learning strand of sessions at the national meeting. He also co-edited two NCHC monographs: Teaching and Learning in Honors with Dr. Cheryl Fuiks and Inspiring Exemplary Teaching and Learning with Dr. John Zubizarreta.

James J. Clauss is Professor of Classics and Director of the University of Washington Honors Program. His area of research includes Hellenistic and Roman literature, Roman topography, and cinema studies. He is the author of Best of the Argonauts (1993), co-editor of Medea (1997) and The Companion to Hellenistic Literature (2010), and co-translator of Rome and Environs (2008).

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Joan Digby has won honors “Survivor” at the C. W. Post Campus of Long Island University for more than thirty years. The cat-feeding, camel-loving, tennis-playing, horse-riding, poem-writing Professor of English is the inventor of Partners in the Parks and a long-time member of the playful NCHC Publications Board.

Rich Eckert is an honors student majoring in business management. He is captain of the men’s swimming and diving team at Clarion University. Within the state of Pennsylvania, he is President of the Student Athletic Association Conference and serves as Pennsylvania’s representative to the NCAA.

Brian C. Etheridge directs the University Honors Program at Louisiana Tech University. He holds the John D. Winters Endowed Professorship in History and also directs the Louisiana Tech Teachers’ Institute and American Foreign Policy Center. His research focuses on the intersection of foreign relations and culture.

Ashley Grimm is completing graduate study in the Masters in Business Administration program at Clarion University. In addition, she serves as a graduate assistant to the Clarion University women’s basketball team. As an undergraduate, she completed the honors program and was selected captain of the women’s basketball team.

Carolyn Haynes is Professor of English and, since 2002, Director of the Miami University Honors Program. A member of the NCHC Publications Board, she teaches interdisciplinary and writing-oriented courses. She received her Ph.D. from University of California, San Diego in 1993 in comparative literature. She is author and editor of Innovations in Interdisciplinary Teaching (2002) and has published articles on student learning, pedagogy, and curricular issues.

Kevin J. Roth is Professor and Chair of the Administrative Science Department at Clarion University of Pennsylvania. He holds a Ph.D. from the University of Pittsburgh in business administration. His teaching and research interest are in the areas of small business, strategic planning, and community planning. He is currently co-editor of the Journal of the Northeastern Association of Business, Economics and Technology and is the Clarion University faculty representative to the NCAA.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

James S. Ruebel has been Professor of Classical Studies and Dean of the Honors College at Ball State University since 2000, following twenty-two years at Iowa State University. His research focuses on the literature and culture of the ancient Roman Republic from Hannibal to the death of Horace. He has been Ball State's Faculty Athletics Representative to the NCAA since 2002.

Hallie E. Savage is Director of the Honors Program at Clarion University and Professor of Communication Sciences and Disorders. She is a past president of NCHC (2008), co-chairs the Assessment and Evaluation Committee, and is a member of the JNCHC Editorial Board and NCHC Publications Board.

Sam Schuman is a past president of the NCHC and served as Chancellor of the University of North Carolina, Asheville and the University of Minnesota, Morris. He is the author of several books on literature and on higher education, most recently Seeing the Light: Religious Colleges in Twenty-First Century America (Johns Hopkins U. Press, 2009).

Christopher A. Snyder is Professor of European History and Director of the Honors Program at Marymount University. He earned his Ph.D. in medieval history from Emory University and taught at Emory and the College of William and Mary before coming to Marymount. He is the author of several books, including The World of King Arthur (Thames and Hudson, 2000) and The Britons (Blackwell, 2003), and he is a frequent lecturer at the Smithsonian Institution.

Ed Taylor is Dean and Vice Provost of Undergraduate Academic Affairs and Associate Professor in the College of Education at the University of Washington. His areas of research include education and morality, closing the achievement gap, and improving civic engagement. He currently serves on the board of directors for Rainier Scholars, an educational enrichment and college access program for students of color in the Pacific Northwest, and is a trustee at Gonzaga University.

Boris Teske is College of Liberal Arts Liaison Librarian and an assistant professor at Louisiana Tech University. He holds an M.A. in history and an M.S. in library science from the University of North Carolina. His research interests include integration of research education and information literacy into curricula.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Kate Wintrol is Assistant Professor and Instruction Librarian at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas (UNLV). She is also the libraries' liaison to the honors college and the athletic department, and she teaches honors history classes. She earned her M.A. in early European history from UNLV and her M.L.I.S. from the University of North Texas. Her research interests include ancient Greek athletics, medieval visionary women, and historical representation in film.

NOTES