“News and Views”

We consider articles in our journal, Insecta Mundi, archival. These articles are presented to our members in the highest state of the art. We try to do a thorough job of editing, and we employ the best printers, use the best plate makers, and a top grade of permanent paper. These articles are a lasting record of the current findings of systematic entomological research. Our Memoir Series is an outlet for larger works; these are published as separate volumes each treating single subjects.

In 1997 the CSE started a new, separate, publication for the purpose of publishing news items pertaining to systematic entomology, book notices, book reviews, and comments on and about entomological subjects of general interest. We also publish research notices, and want lists.

This newsletter is available free to any interested person and all libraries. It is also reproduced on our webpage [<http://gnv.ifas.ufl.edu/~entweb/cse.htm>].

“News and Views” is open to all members for the publication of short notices, comments, and so on. Non-members may submit items of general interest, to be published subject to the approval of the editorial board. Our limited resources will not guarantee hard copy space to non-members, but we do include more items in the webpage issue than in the printed page edition.

To the best of our knowledge, we are currently mailing the hard copy edition to all members of the CSE, all research associates of the Florida State Collection of Arthropods, and to other systematists and libraries who ask to be placed on the mailing list.

If you would like this publication, please write, fax, or e-mail your request. If you have e-mail service, please give us your address. We would prefer to send your copy by e-mail to save postage. To e-mail us, please use the address of the Managing Editor which is: oedemeridae@msn.com.
