If Documentary Editing were a grown child celebrating its 25 birthday, its parents, concerned with their offspring's professional welfare and future, would remember fondly earlier times and might well ask questions about plans for life after graduate school. Clearly, the journal of the Association for Documentary Editing is different from a child, although, over the years, many people have left their imprint on Documentary Editing and much has changed since the publication's beginning in 1979. Unlike an adult on the verge of complete emersion into professional life, however, Documentary Editing cannot look back and reflect on the course of the past quarter of a century. Only its readers can do that. As one way for the journal's audience to retrace past developments and celebrate earlier achievements evident in the pages of the first 25 volumes of Documentary Editing the editors of the journal invite members of ADE to nominate five of their favorite articles for reprinting in the anniversary issue (Fall 2003).

Following is a complete listing of contributions to Documentary Editing. The article listing includes a variety of entries, articles in the strict sense of the professional journal genre and also addresses and talks; it excludes reviews, however, an important regular feature of Documentary Editing. For the readers' convenience all entries are numbered consecutively (in the left-hand column) in chronological order of publication; the publication date is also in the left-hand column; the names of the author and the titles of the articles make up the center column; and there is room for comments in the right-hand column.

Please send up to five nominations of articles for reprinting in the fall issue to the editor of Documentary Editing by 10 October 2003. Comments concerning your favorite articles are welcome. You can send your choices and comments via e-mail (mwoeck@iupui.edu); use the reverse side of the address sheet of the Summer 2003 issue as a mailer; mail a note to Marianne S. Wokeck, Institute for American Thought, IUPUI, 425 University Blvd., Indianapolis, IN 46202-5140; or fax them (317.274.1162).
