

4-28-2010

New on the Web: The China Tracker

Follow this and additional works at: <http://digitalcommons.unl.edu/chinabeatarchive>

 Part of the Asian History Commons, Asian Studies Commons, Chinese Studies Commons, and the International Relations Commons

"New on the Web: The China Tracker" (2010). The China Beat Blog Archive 2008-2012. 670.
<http://digitalcommons.unl.edu/chinabeatarchive/670>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the China Beat Archive at DigitalCommons@University of Nebraska - Lincoln. It has been accepted for inclusion in The China Beat Blog Archive 2008-2012 by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@University of Nebraska - Lincoln.

New on the Web: The China Tracker

April 28, 2010 in blogging by The China Beat | Permalink

The China Tracker

What a superpower wants.

If you'd like to read more about "What a superpower wants," check out a new blog from Forbes, "The China Tracker." Only a week old, the site features pieces from regular contributors such as Gady Epstein (Beijing bureau chief for Forbes), Bill Bishop (a Beijing-based investor/adviser to start-ups, blogger at DigiCha.com, and prolific Twitter user under the name @niubi), and China Beat consulting editor Jeff Wasserstrom (whose first post is "Terminology For A Fast-Changing China"). Recent articles have discussed "China's Barbie Doll Economics," what Hertz and Avis have to do with the U.S.-China relationship, and the politics of China's new real estate measures.

Readers of the Forbes site might notice another China Beatnik's name there as well this week: editor Maura Cunningham has a piece on "China's Coffee Culture."

Tags: Forbes, Jeff Wasserstrom, Maura Cunningham