house gossip, there is often a lot of truth in hearsay, and some kind of follow-up is necessary for anything but the most obviously scurrilous rumor. The kind of evidence needed to prove judicial misconduct may only be discoverable by the agency constituted for that purpose and the kind of pattern of misconduct that requires discipline may only be discernable if enough single incidents are reported.

There will be no rapid post-pandemic return to normal for the courts; long-term changes such as more technology and hand-washing will be required. Similarly, forgetting the recent lessons learned from the #MeToo and racial justice movements is not an option for the courts.

Since October 1990, Cynthia Gray has been director of the Center for Judicial Ethics, a national clearinghouse for information about judicial ethics and discipline that is part of the National Center for State Courts. (The CJE was part of the American Judicature Society before that organization's October 2014 dissolution.) She summarizes recent cases and advisory opinions, answers requests for information about judicial conduct, writes a weekly blog (at www.ncsjudicialethicsblog.org), writes and edits the Judicial Conduct Reporter, and organizes the biennial National College on Judicial Conduct and Ethics. She has made numerous presentations at judicial-education programs and written numerous articles and publications on judicial-ethics topics. A 1980 graduate of the Northwestern University School of Law, Gray clerked for Judge Hubert L. Will of the United States District Court of the Northern District of Illinois for two years and was a litigation attorney in two private law firms for eight years.
