“LAWYER? I haven’t got one!”

We hear this every day in the Trust Department. But it doesn’t discourage us. Because we have yet to meet the man — or woman — who doesn’t know a lawyer. They’re just surprised that we prefer to have their lawyer present while we discuss estate plans...and that we insist upon his drawing the necessary instruments.

An Important Legislative Year

As Congress and forty-seven state legislatures began their 1961 deliberations, they were confronted with many issues of grave import and much legislation may be expected to emerge.

Statutes, codes and session laws will have new provisions added—existing ones revised, repealed or superseded. Requirements as yet unknown will be laid down and penalties imposed for failure to comply. New rights and remedies will be born and some previously relied upon will be greatly changed or abolished in their entirety.

To keep informed of all such changes as they come, lawyers everywhere will turn to the familiar supplements to the federal and state editions of Shepard's Citations. Issued periodically, they list statute, code and session law repeals, amendments and additions as they occur and the latest court decisions construing laws already in effect.

Do you have the Shepard publication especially designed to provide such information as it relates to the jurisdiction in which you practice? If not, we suggest you ask us to tell you how inexpensively it can be acquired.

KEEPING IN STEP WITH THE GROWTH OF EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLANS

The growth of pension and profit-sharing plans in the United States has been one of the dramatic developments in our recent economic history. These employee retirement programs are commanding the attention of an ever-growing number of companies, their management, their legal counsel.

The Omaha National Bank is serving as trustee of a wide variety of benefit plans, large and small. Attorneys and their clients are invited to draw on the administrative and investment background of our officers in finding sound answers to employee benefit plan problems.
