

April 1998

An Interactive Model for Exploring the Concerns of People of Color in Predominantly White Institutions

Olasupo Laosebikan

Chicago School of Professional Psychology

Ann Wilson

Chicago School of Professional Psychology

Carla Triplet

Chicago School of Professional Psychology

Janet Camp

Chicago School of Professional Psychology

Neal Bowen

Chicago School of Professional Psychology

See next page for additional authors

Follow this and additional works at: <http://digitalcommons.unl.edu/pocpwi3>

Part of the Race, Ethnicity and Post-Colonial Studies Commons

---

Laosebikan, Olasupo; Wilson, Ann; Triplet, Carla; Camp, Janet; Bowen, Neal; Gupta, Sonali; and Tolliver, Derise, "An Interactive Model for Exploring the Concerns of People of Color in Predominantly White Institutions" (1998). Third Annual National Conference (1998). 29.

<http://digitalcommons.unl.edu/pocpwi3/29>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the People of Color in Predominantly White Institutions at DigitalCommons@University of Nebraska - Lincoln. It has been accepted for inclusion in Third Annual National Conference (1998) by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@University of Nebraska - Lincoln.

---

Authors

Olasupo Laosebikan, Ann Wilson, Carla Triplet, Janet Camp, Neal Bowen, Sonali Gupta, and Derise Tolliver

An Interactive Model for Exploring the Concerns of People of Color in Predominantly White Institutions

Olasupo Laosebikan

Chicago School of Professional Psychology

Ann Wilson

Chicago School of Professional Psychology

Carla Triplet

Chicago School of Professional Psychology

Janet Camp

Chicago School of Professional Psychology

Neal Bowen

Chicago School of Professional Psychology

Sonali Gupta

Chicago School of Professional Psychology

Derise Tolliver

DePaul University

“We present in this study, the stories of 22 graduate students of color (nine African Americans, eight Hispanic Americans, three Asian Americans, and two foreign students.”

There is neither a "typical" person of color nor a typical predominantly white institution. Even if there were, we would still need an interactive model to understand the experience of this fictional person and institution, because experience is the product of relationship or interaction.

Since two persons of color in the same predominantly white institution—a Malcom and a Martin - for example, may provoke widely different reactions, in exploring our concerns as people of color in a predominantly white university setting, we decided that a narrative, rather than a more structure approach, would best serve our purpose.

Narration is a powerful tool of discernment. As one tells one's story, one begins to understand it better. Narration is also cathartic, hence it is the bedrock of psychotherapy. We present in this study, the stories of 22 graduate students of color (nine African Americans, eight Hispanic Americans, three Asian Americans and two foreign students.) We also report on the reactions of "the majority" and the attitudes of university authorities when these stories were presented for discussion.

PRESENTERS

Olasupo Laosebikan, Ph.D. Chicago School of Professional Psychology

Derise Tolliver, Ph.D. De Paul University

Tiffany Allen, M. Ed. Chicago School of Professional Psychology

Ann Wilson, Chicago School of Professional Psychology

Carla Triplet, M.A. Chicago School of Professional Psychology

Janet Camp, Chicago School of Professional Psychology
Neal Bowen, Chicago School of Professional Psychology
Sonali Gupta, Chicago School of Professional Psychology